BATTLING THE RAPIDS

Cold And Wet But Fun

BY GEORGE NEVIN

A quartet of Marin college students battled the mini-rapids of Paper Mill Creek yesterday and when it was over no one could decide which had won.

True, the four--three from the College of Marin and one from Sonoma State College--did ride a mile downstream, skillfully avoiding most snags and shallows, but they paid the price of cold feet, wet clothes and scratches.

The trip started where a longer excursion Wednesday had left off--a huge snag on the creek near Jewell.

"We started at Kent Lake and only got this far when that snag got us," said Kevin Kilbride, 20, of 113 Rollingwood Drive, San Rafael. He pointed to a gaggle of inner tubes lashed together and firmly caught on an overhanging tree trunk.

"We wanted to go all the way to Tomales Bay, but we ended right here," said Tim Ecke, 18, of Residence 44, San Quentin. His brother Bob, 20, said this was just as well because "the first day it was too fast, deep and cold."

"You should have seen it Wednesday," said Gary Hanson, 20, of 53 Ridgewood Drive, San Rafael. "The water was up to there," a point on the bank six feet above the present water line.

Bits of clothing hanging limply from branches well above stream level bore him out.

Wading in knee-deep water cold enough to bring out "two-inch goose bumps," as Tim said, the river rats cut the raft apart and, hopping onto 11 of the tubes, were swept downstream. Behind them they left 13 of the tubes still clinging to the snag.

"Look out, a tree," someone shouted, and the raft suddenly grew eight arms and legs which paddled furiously. Looking like an oversized black widow, the raft veered away from the tree and toward a thicket on the opposite bank.

They proceeded downstream in this fashion, sometimes laughing so hard they couldn't steer. Near the end of their run they liberated a basketball from a snag.

They finally came ashore at Tocaloma Bridge.

"We'd like to go all the way to Tomales Bay," said Tim, who described himself and Kevin as experienced river runners. "We've been down the Illinois River in Oregon in a huge truck inner tube." The others shivered in the brisk wind and didn't say much.

And has this taste of adventure satisfied them? Not at all.

"Yes, we'll do it again," said Kevin, "maybe on the Russian River at Cloverdale.

"Today's run was just enough for a hello and a goodbye."

Gate Bridge Condition Is 'Excellent'

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The Golden Gate Bridge, in its first major check-up since it opened 33 years ago, has been found generally in "excellent condition."

"Although some repairs and replacements should be instituted as soon as possible, there are no defects so critical that immediate emergency steps must be taken," according to the report issued yesterday by Ammann and Whitney, New York engineering consultants who conducted the two-year inspection at a cost of $490,000.

The report was presented to bridge district directors, who referred it without discussion to the building and operating committee.

The report estimated that the cost of needed repairs would total $10.5 million over the next decade. The estimate, however, was in 1969 dollars and provided only 6 per cent for contingencies, low for such projects.

The biggest chunk of the estimate was $7,090,000 to replace suspender ropes, the vertical supports to the roadbed from the suspension cables. Faulty design of the boxes that hold the bottom ends of the ropes makes maintenance impossible, and new boxes will be installed so that future access to the ropes will be possible, Ammann and Whitney said.

Other repairs needed generally included corroded areas and the roadbed itself, which already are part of the district's regular maintenance work.

"It is fortunate that the irreplaceable parts such as the cables, anchorages, towers and piers above water level are all in sound condition," the report said.

With the recommended repairs and replacements, the bridge "will be capable of serving the Bay Area well into the future," it said.

The $10.5 million estimated for repairs was just for those which would be done by outside contractors because they require special rigging, skills and experience. Ammann and Whitney said.

Of the $490,000 spent on the inspection, $309,000 was for Ammann and Whitney's subcontractor, the American Bridge Division of the U.S. Steel Corp. Most of the subcontractor's payment was for equipment replacements "which constitute a permanent improvement to the structure," the report said.

The report noted that no effort was made to inspect the foundations of the bridge below the wa-

Tam Freshman, 14, Is Arraigned In Fatal Shooting At Strawberry

A 14-year-old Tamalpais High School freshman was arraigned yesterday on charges of murder and armed robbery stemming from the Jan. 9 shooting of a Sausalito man at the Town and Country Shopping Center in Strawberry and the robbery of a market the same night.

A second suspect is being sought, sheriff's officers said.

George Jerome McKee Jr., who lives with his mother at 49 Cole Drive, Marin City, was charged in Marin Municipal Court late yesterday afternoon, but Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. ordered that he be transferred to juvenile court.

He also remanded the boy to juvenile hall to be held there without bail.

Lt. Guido Battaglia of the Marin Sheriff's Department said that McKee was arrested yesterday after a lengthy investigation of the slaying of James Edward Bork, 38, who was shot twice while window-shopping outside the Polynesian House.

A gun believed to be the murder weapon, a .38 caliber revolver, was found in the linen closet of McKee's home, Battaglia said.

A woman friend of the murdered man had told officers that Bork was shot point-blank by

Rail Industry Shutting System As Strike Hits

Nationwide Lockout Is First In History

WASHINGTON (AP)—The railroad industry began closing down its $28-million-a-day nationwide system today in retaliation to a strike by four shop-craft unions against a single line, the Union Pacific.

"We deplore such action. We are only using it as a last resort to hold this industry together and protect the public against onerous wage settlements they eventually have to bear the cost of," said the industry chief national negotiator, John P. Hiltz.

It was the first nationwide rail lockout in the industry's history.

Hiltz said at a news conference after the midnight strike against the Union Pacific that the nationwide lockout of some 580,000 workers would go into effect by 10 p.m. EST, but some railroads were already beginning to curtail operations.

"We hope for a quick settlement without drastic effects on the public," said Hiltz, who favors a new federal law requiring compulsory arbitration of railroad disputes.

"Our action was timed to minimize effects on the public," he said.

If asked by the Nixon administration, "We will seek permanent legislation," Hiltz said.

The Penn Central Railroad said all passenger train traffic in and out of Pittsburgh would be halted after the 12:45 p.m. train leaves for New York. Other railroads announcing shutdowns tonight included Louisville & Nashville, Norfolk and Western, Frisco, Chicago Northwestern, Kansas City Southern, Missouri Pacific, Santa Fe, Rock Island and Burlington.

Hiltz said the nationwide shutdown was to prevent the four AFL-CIO unions representing some 45,000 railroad shop workers from picking off one rail-

Price Rise Relief Reported In Sight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's chief economic adviser said today the U.S. consumer should begin to get relief from rising prices this year, but he said he did not think there would be "any large rise in unemployment" as the anti-inflation measures take hold.

Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the council of Economic Advisers, said at a news conference prices this year may be only 4.3 per cent over 1969's level, compared to the 4.7 per cent increase registered between 1968 and 1969. By the end of the year, he added, price increases may be down to 3.5 per cent.

McCracken and his CEA colleagues, Herbert Stein and Hendrik S. Houthakker, discussed their economic report to Nixon, which was released Friday night.

In his own economic message to Congress, the President asserted the economy is slowing and might be ready for a reacceleration in mid-1971.

McCracken said he expected a continued flat trend in the economy's real output and "while I do not want to attach any specific figure to the unemployment rate . . . I do not see any large rise in unemployment during this period."

Broadly speaking, McCracken said, the anti-inflation program

Nixon Plans To Seek Bigger Missile System

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has decided to ask Congress for a major expansion of the missile defense system to provide "virtually infallible" protection against the possibility of attack—or nuclear blackmail—by Red China a decade from now.

Nixon's announcement at a news conference Friday night rekindled rumblings of discontent from congressional opponents of the antiballistic missile — ABM— and expressions of support from those who successfully defended the program in bitter debate last summer.

The President said the United States must take steps now to handle a situation that may confront the nation in a decade.

"Ten years from now the Communist Chinese, for example, among others, may have a significant nuclear capability," he said. If relations with mainland China aren't improved, he said, "it will be very important for the United States to have some kind of defense so that nuclear blackmail could not be used against the United States" or U.S. allies in Asia.

The first phase and proposed second phase together would cost an estimated $6 billion over several years. While first phase ABMs are to protect retaliatory

Billion-Dollar G.E. Settlement

NEW YORK (AP) — The two largest unions in the three-month strike against General Electric Co. have agreed tentatively to a billion-dollar settlement and the other 10 striking unions are expected to concur.

The settlement, calling for an 88-cents-an-hour wage increase during a 40-month contract, was approved Friday by the full negotiating committees of the AFL.

The settlement, calling for an 88-cents-an-hour wage increase during a 40-month contract, was approved Friday by the full negotiating committees of the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers, which represents 89,000 GE employes, and the United Electrical Workers, an independent union representing 16,000.

J. Curtis Counts, head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, predicted Friday that the 130,000 strikers could return to GE's 280 plants within

RISING FROM THE FROZEN MYSTIC

In Mystic, Conn., the Mystic River is partially frozen and similarly everything around is almost still. But the birds are in flight because it's winter and because they're hungry. When the river freezes there's a fight to stay alive because it's hard to forage. While this scene, photographed yesterday, has a certain beauty, there's a threat of starvation and death for these wild mallard ducks. Some of them become stuck to the ice as they sleep at night and die. (AP Wirephoto)

Chrysler Announces 66.5% Reduction In 1969 Profits

DETROIT (AP) — Battered by losses in the fourth quarter, Chrysler Corp. ended 1969 with a 69.5 per cent reduction in profits, which totaled $88.88 million compared to $290.7 million in 1968.

Net losses in the fourth quarter totaled $4.4 million or 10 cents a share, a dramatic drop from the profit of $112.2 million or $2.39 recorded a year earlier by the nation's third largest automaker.

It was the poorest showing for the firm since 1963 when Chrysler earned $65.4 million.

Chrysler said worldwide sales during 1969 were $7.1 billion, compared with $7.4 billion in 1968. fourth quarter sales, respectively, were $1.8 billion and $2.1 billion.

Chrysler's report came a day after General Motors Corp. announced its net earnings in 1969 decline by $21 million, while worldwide sales were a record $24.3 billion. GM's earnings dropped from $1,732 million in 1968 to $1,711 million last year.

The other two major automobile manufacturers, Ford Motor Co. and American Motors Corp., have yet to announce their earnings.

Chrysler said in a statement, "a shift in consumer demand early in the year resulted in a less favorable product mix and gave rise to added costs of special merchandising programs undertaken to sustain a balanced level of sales."

But the decline continued, bringing the fourth quarter losses. High investories of new cars forced Chrysler into layoffs which began in December and continue, affecting thousands of production workers. Some white collar jobs have been eliminated and the firm named a new president this month in an apparent move to give the belt-tightening movement new leadership.

John J. Riccardo, the new president, said Friday that economy efforts would continue.

Chrysler said 1969 sales outside the U.S. and Canada were a record $1.6 billion or 6.1 per cent above the $1.5 billion recorded in 1968. But the firm said "earnings abroad were adversely affected by the economic conditions in the United Kingdom and the cost of new product programs and facilities to serve many growing world markets. Earnings figures from overseas operations were not available.

Figures released Friday were preliminary and subject to audit.

Last Riot Trial Witness Is Heard

CHICAGO (AP) — The 113th and last defense witness took the stand Friday in the trial of seven men charged with conspiring to incite riots at the time of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The last witness, who ended a parade of personalities ranging from government officials to a youth folk-song hero, was the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of Operation Breadbasket, economic arm of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"I told Rennard (defendant Rennie Davis) that the long-haried whites were the new niggers, and if they didn't think they'd get whipped, just try," he testified regarding a warning he gave the defendants before the convention.

Another defense witness, Bobby G. Seale, national chairman of the Black Panther Party, was at one time a defendant, but was sentenced to four years in prison for contempt for repeated courtroom outbursts in which he demanded permission to represent himself in court. Seale still faces trial on the riot-conspiracy charges.

Defense attorney William M. Kunstler told the court after Jackson's testimony that he hopes to present a film and one or two documents—but no more witnesses.

After closing arguments, the trial goes to jury.

For the jury this could mean going home by Valentine's Day, their first time at home since the trial started Sept. 24. They have been living in a downtown hotel, but their families have been allowed to visit them on weekends.

Judge Julius J. Hoffman is presiding at the U.S. District Court trial.

Police Say Cabbie Killing Is Admitted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Busboy Robert Bromell admitted to police Friday that he shot and killed Yellow Cab driver Charles Jarman during a robbery, but claimed it was an accident.

Bromell, 28, was held without bail on a murder charge. Jarman was shot before dawn Sunday and died at a hospital a day later.

The suspect claimed Jarman lunged at him "and I pulled the trigger. I didn't mean to do it...it just happened."

In his confession confirmed by homicide detectives, Bromell said he took the cab driver's wallet containing $27 because his girlfriend always kept nagging him for money.

"I showed him my gun and he lunged at me...and that's how it happened," Bromell said.

After taking Jarman's wallet, Bromell said he fled on foot toward the Tenderloin District where he roomed with his girlfriend. He said he tossed the wallet into some shrubs and threw a .22 caliber revolver down a storm drain.

"I knew I'd get caught," said Bromell. "I left fingerprints all over the cab. I've got a record so I knew it was only a matter of time before the police picked me up."

Detectives said Bromell deserted a wife and six-month-old daughter in Oregon several weeks ago and came to San Francisco. When he was unable to find work as a mechanic, he was forced to work as a busboy in the city's financial district.

President Defends Choice Of Carswell

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says his choice for the Supreme Court, G. Harrold Carswell, has a judicial record that is "impeccable and without a taint of any racism" regardless of what the nominee may have said in a political speech in 1948.

At his news conference Friday night, Nixon was asked if he would have nominated the judge for the high court if he had known about a speech Carswell gave 22 years ago advocating white supremacy.

"I am not concerned about what Judge Carswell said ... when he was a candidate for a state legislature," Nixon said. Carswell was running for the Georgia legislature when he made the 1948 speech.

"As you know, he had six years as U.S. attorney and 12 years as a federal district judge —a record which is impeccable and without a taint of racism ..." Nixon said that Carswell, a judge on the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals, is a strict constructionist and this should give the Supreme Court "the kind of balance that it needs."

Nixon said "any individual may find instances where he has made statements in which his position has changed."

Carswell, a 50-year-old Tallahassee, Fla., resident, has renounced his 1948 speech and told the Senate Judiciary Committee this week that he is not a racist.

Backers of the nomination were hoping to wind up the hearings Monday so they could possibly vote on Tuesday. But opponents could cause a week's delay.

Republican Senate Leader Hugh Scott said Friday Carswell will win approval by the Senate by a vote of at least 80-to-20.

Only two lawmakers—Sens. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., and William Proxmire, D-Wis.—have announced they will vote against the nomination. Sen. Birch Bayh, the Indiana Democrat who led the successful fight against confirmation of Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., has not announced how he will vote.

Stones Ask $11 Million FromRaceway

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—An $11 million lawsuit has been filed against the operator of a speedway who cancelled a scheduled concert featuring Britain's Rolling Stones.

Site of the Dec. 6 free concert then was switched to the Altamont Speedway east of Oakland and drew 300,000 rock fans. Four of them died, including Meredith Hunter, 18, Oakland, who was stabbed.

Attorney Melvin Belli announced the filing of the suit Friday by transatlantic telephone. It seeks $10 million punitive damages, $500,000 special damages and $500,000 general damages from Sears Point International Raceway, Inc., and its president, Craig Murray; and Filmways, Inc., of Los Angeles which owns Sears Point, and its president, Richard St. John.

The suit alleged Sears Point Raceway north of San Francisco originally agreed to host the outdoor concert and then cancelled at the last minute.

"As a result, the Rolling Stones free concert had to be hastily removed to an alternate site at the Altamont Speedway in Alameda County, Calif., with resultant damages," the suit asserted.

Ranchers in the Altamont area have claimed wholesale property damage from rock fans. Officials later restricted the use permit of the speedway to auto and motorcycle racing while limiting future crowds

Ranchers in the Altamont area have claimed wholesale property damage from rock fans. Officials later restricted the use permit of the speedway to auto and motorcycle racing while limiting future crowds to 4,300.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Heavy Rains

TOKYO (AP) — Heavy rains late Friday and today ended a record 53-day dry spell in the Tokyo area, but national police said the high winds and floods that came with the storm caused eight deaths.

They included six dead and nine missing when a 11,643-ton Japanese freighter sank when its anchor chain snapped outside Onahama harbor in north Japan.

Hayakawa's View

HUNTINGTON, W.VA. (AP) — Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, beset by rock-throwing militants at Northeastern University in Boston Thursday night, said Friday that student militants are comparable to the Nazi Brownshirts of Hitler's Germany.

"The most important analogy between the Nazis and today's students is their oversimplification of the issues," Hayakawa told a news conference here.

He said the militants, tactics are to disrupt the educational process, and to bring public distrust of the establishment by shouting obscenities and using signs and slogans.

Referring to the Boston incident, Hayakawa said: "I have become some kind of hated symbol to these people. However, their efforts to prevent my speaking are completely self-defeating."

Air Line Strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Striking ground employes halted all flights of National Air Lines early today after the company and Air Line Employes Association broke off negotiations Friday night.

Talks were to resume today, however, at the National Labor Relations Board headquarters here.

About 3,500 employes of the nation's sixth largest domestic carrier began the strike at 12:01 a.m. They have been without a contract since last spring, and negotiations involve both wages and fringe benefits. No details have been given.

Most of the striking employes are reservation clerks, ticket agents, ramp agents and clerical personnel.

Militant To Teach

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Harry Edwards, 27, long associated with black militancy in Northern California, will begin teaching sociology next July at the University of California's parent campus here.

The announcement Friday by Chancellor Roger Heyns touched off immediate controversy to which Heyns replied: "Apparently some persons would substitute as a criterion for appointment a man's opinions about racial and social conditions in place of scholarship and competence in his field."

Edwards tried unsuccessfully to organize a black boycott of the 1968 Olympic Games. He also promoted demonstrations by Negro athletes at San Jose State College, resulting in cancellation of a football game.

One of his critics, Dr. Max Rafferty, state superintendent of public instruction, called his appointment at Berkeley "like pouring a can of gasoline on a forest fire."

Herion Sentence

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — The son of a judge who once ordered the prosecution of parents who held a drinking party for teen-agers has received a suspended sentence for possession of heroin.

Rodney S. Eielson Jr., 18, son of Circuit Court Judge Rodney S. Eielson, was placed on two years' probation on the recommendation of his lawyer, Joseph Mirsky.

Judge Eielson stood by his son's side as a two-year sentence was suspended by Circuit Judge Thomas Sullivan. The younger Eielson had pleaded guilty to narcotics possession. Police said he had 17 envelopes of heroin when arrested last May 14.

Judge Eielson received national attention in 1964 for ordering the prosecution of adults in Darien who arranged a party for teen-agers where drinks were served. The traffic death of a 17-year-old girl followed the party.

Midway Returns

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The attack carrier Midway rejoins the fleet today after a four-year reconversion that cost $119.9 million more than originally expected.

The modernization, first budgeted at $84.3 million, eventually cost $204.2 million, the Navy said.

The cost overrun was attributed in part to "grossly inefficient" estimates on how much it would cost to repair some of the carrier's machinery.

New nuclear carriers cost $500 million, but the Midway, built late in World War II, is not nuclear powered.

No Welcome

NEW YORK (AP) — French President Georges Pompidou will not receive an official city welcome when he visits here March 2, Mayor John V. Lindsay has announced.

Rep. Betram L. Podell, a Brooklyn Democrat, said Friday Lindsay had given him the distinct impression during a conversation that the omission was a deliberate snub because France sold 110 Mirage jet fighters to Libya.

The mayor's office would neither confirm nor deny Podell's version. It said only that no State Department request for an official reception had been received.

Hands Blown Off

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Air Force doctor treated a young Vietnamese girl whose hands had been blown off, then learned later she was wounded while fusing a bomb to kill him.

The Air Force said the girl's aunt brought her to Capt. Jerold D. Albright of Haven, Kan., at the Ca Mau province hospital in the southern Mekong Delta.

Her hands had been blown off at the wrists. Albright cleaned the wounds, stopped the bleeding and bandaged the stumps of her arms.

Later the girl told officials she was helping her aunt, a Viet Cong build a bomb from plastic explosive when it went off. The bomb was to be placed under the seat of the doctor's jeep, she said.

Marcos Says Rioting Communist Inspired

MANILA (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos said today that those who tried to storm his palace were Communist-inspired men dedicated to throwing the Philippine government.

In a nationwide broadcast after eight hours of rioting Friday night and today left five dead, more than 150 injured and at least 300 in jail, Marcos said those who fought in the streets were not the students who have been pressing for reforms.

They were "men who acted in accordance with a well-organized plan to attack the government through acts of rebillion and subversion, "He said, adding that they behaved "in the pattern of Chinese Communists —waving red banners and calling for revolt in their speeches and leaflets."

Marcos assured the nation that the situation was under control and the government was prepared to put down any insurrection.

Marcos decided to go on radio and television after an emergency meeting with advisers. Before he spoke, a government official announced that criminal charges will be brought against those arrested.

Manila residents said the disturbances were the worst anti-government demonstrations in the city's history.

Many of the 1,500 troops and federal police who helped put down the violence Friday night and early today remained outside the palace as Marcos and his advisers conferred. Workers removed masses of debris and burned vehicles from roads leading to the palace.

Display windows of stores in the nearby shopping district of Quiapo, the heart of Manila, were smashed and looted of their contents. Some buildings bore evidence of bullet marks.

Manila Mayor Antonio Villegas today cancelled all demonstration permits until "tempers cool off."

At the height of the rioting, which Marcos and his family watched from the palace, he ordered an official to study the possibility of suspending Villegas from office "for refusing to discharge his duty in maintaining peace and order."

Villegas had ordered Manila policemen to stay away from demonstrations after officials criticized police for their handling of a student protest Monday in which more than 300 persons were injured.

This demonstration, by an estimated 20,000 students, took place outside Congress as Marcos and his wife emerged after he had delivered a "State of the Nation" message.

Tricia Now Has Measles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tricia Nixon, who went to Florida to recover from a bout of flu, is now ill with German measles as well, the White House said today.

Her mother has flown to Florida to be with her 23-year-old daughter at their Key Biscayne home, where Tricia was staying alone, except for staff.

Mrs. Nixon made the flight Friday night after the President's news conference. But her trip and the illness were not announced until this morning by Mrs. Nixon's press secretary, Constance Stuart.

Tricia has been tutoring in a Washington, D. C. elementary school, and last November she helped launch a District school drive for immunization of youngsters against German measles.

Mrs. Stuart said Tricia, herself, had taken a shot at the White House in early November.

Agnew Says U.S. Is Held In High Regard In Asia

BALTIMORE (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew says his 25-day trip to Asia convinced him U.S. prestige is high and it "is time for the American people to stop eating themselves up over the few malcontented words of dissidents who don't know what is going on in the world."

Speaking to 1,000 friends and political supporters from both parties at a testimonial dinner Friday night, the vice president said the trip reinforced his belief that "what we have in the United States is not a prime operating target for national masochism.

"The regard that the United States is held in the rest of the world," he added, "is something that every American should have a chance to see, and something that I would hope more American conveyors of information would see fit to portray."

Agnew took some swipes in his off-the-cuff speech at some of those present, including Maryland's Democratic Gov. Marvin Mandel and some 100 anti-war protesters who marched around in 32-degree temperature outside the hall before the dinner.

Nodding at Mandel, who was elected governor to succeed Agnew by the General Assembly and now faces a possible primary fight from Ambassador to France Sargent Shriver, the vice president commented "I understand you're are getting ready to open your own Paris peace talks."

And Agnew said Shriver is overcoming his problem of meeting state residency requirements by "negotiating for 20 acres of wetlands," a reference to alleged irregularities in deals between the state and privat intrsts during both his and Mandl's term.

As for the demonstrators, Agnew drew applause when he said of his visit to Vietnam: "You'd be darned proud to see the attitude of American troops in Vietnam—and the attitudes of the troops is not reflected in the attitudes of the people you saw outside this hall tonight."

After marching around and chanting "End the War in Vietnam," the protesters held a mock trial of Agnew and convicted him of crimes against the people, referring specifically to some of his financial dealings while governor. Then, they dispersed just about the time a second group of two dozen policemen arrived.

The dinner had a distinctly Republican cast and some of the proceeds from the $100-a-plate affair will wind up in GOP National Committee coffers. But Democrats present included Mandel, Baltimore County Executive Dale Anderson and Baltimore city leader Irv Koven.

Filing Opens For April 14 Election

Filing of candidacy papers for April 14 municipal elections opened Thursday and will continue through Feb. 19 at noon.

Candidates may file papers at city halls in Marin County, and in Sonoma County they may file at either city halls or the county clerk's office, Santa Rosa.

Injuries Minor

ter line "as this was beyond the scope of the report and would be extremely expensive." But it recommended periodic checks of settlemnt of the two tower piers, "especially in view of possible fissures in the rock formation underlying the Marin pier."

Most of the minor repairs and improvements dealt with painting, and calking, drilling drainage holes where water accumulates, and replacement of rivet heads with high tension bolts.

Any substantial load added to the bridge, such as a second deck, should be preceded by retightening cable bands, it noted.

Unless repairs of the roadbed are undertaken, the report cautioned, "the steel within it or blow it will suffer from corrosion and the slab will eventually become unsafe."

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

GRANT—Voted unanimously to sponsor a $120,000 federal planning grant sought by Marin County Transit Systems for feeder and intracounty bus service in Marin.

PATHWAY—Urged the state to cooperate with Marin County in providing a pedestrian and bicycle pathway over Richardson Bay Bridge.

PERSONNEL—Received a report from Luehring that the number of employees increased less than 100 per cent from 1938 through 1969, while traffic increased more than 1,000 per cent.

APPRAISAL—Hired Ammann and Whitney for $2,500 to appraise the bridge for insurance purposes.

INSURANCE—Received a low bid of $24,772 from Bayly, Martin and Fay of San Francisco for annual insurance for the Tiburon ferry service.

a week to 10 days if they vote to accept the contract.

Counts pulled most of the agreement together during separate meetings with the company and unions between Jan. 7 and 28. The parties ironed out details in face-to-face negotiations.

The settlement provides an 88-cent addition to the old $3.25 hourly wage and an additional 17 cents per hour average in fringe benefits.

When they struck Oct. 26, the unions sought a 90-cents-an-hour increase in a 30-month contract, plus up to 50 cents an hour more for special skills.

GE's last publicly announced offer, on Dec. 6, called for an immediate 20-cents-an-hour boost, 3 per cent increases in both the second and third years, and a cost-of-living clause providing possible additional increase of up to 2 per cent in each of the last two years.

GE said the tentative settlement would cost in the area of $1 billion.

Washington labor sources said the GE pattern would "affect every labor contract in 1970," and predicted a new wage spiral.

The union estimated the wage-and-benefits increase amounted to 7.5 per cent per year. The Labor Department reported the mean in such increases last year was 8.2 per cent in all new contracts and 7.1 per cent in new manufacturing contracts.

Senate Passes Newspaper Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed a bill to allow mergers by financially ailing newspapers. The aim is to preserve a wide variety of editorial voices.

In a 63-14 vote Friday the Newspaper Preservation Act to exempt poor newspapers from certain antitrust laws was sent to the House, where the prospect for early action appears doubtful.

The measure allows newspapers "in probable danger of failing" to combine production, advertising and circulation operations with a successful newspaper in the same location while maintaining separate news and editorial staffs and policies.

Escaper Sent To Vacaville

Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court yesterday again ordered Paul Kenneth McSweeney, 22, of Mill Valley, to the State Medical Facility at Vacaville for a 90-day evaluation period.

When Judge McGuire made the same order in November, McSweeney escaped from a bailiff returning him to jail in the old courthouse in San Rafael. He was captured in December.

McSweeney pleaded guilty yesterday to the escape charge. The original commitment to Vacaville was made in an old burglary case.

Court Appoints Psychiatrists

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court appointed two psychiatrists yesterday to examine Dean Walter Plagowski, 35, of no known address, after officials at the State Medical Facility at Vacaville said he is psychotic.

The Vacaville officials also said that Plagowski is "a menace to society."

Plagowski has pleaded guilty to a charge of battery against a police officer July 22 in Sausalito. Charges of waving a bayonet near the Tides Bookstore and resisting arrest were dismissed.

Man Sought In Assault Gives Up

A Tiburon man sought for nearly a month for failing to appear to face charges of assault with a deadly weapon and burglary is back in jail today.

Jon Fredric Bangert, 31, of 1830 Mar West, surrendered himself to San Rafael police yesterday and is being held in lieu of $10,000 bail.

Bangert was arrested Dec. 19 went to the Disco department store in San Rafael, purchased a 30-30 caliber rifle with which he allegedly struck store manager James E. Mariais and then fled in a black rented limousine. He also reportedly threatened to kill Mariais.

Police later stopped the car and said they discovered items stolen from the Sausalito home of Paul O'Callaghan of 212 Richardon Street.

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. released Bangert pending a psychiatric hearing and the suspect failed to show up at a Dec. 30 arraignment.

ECONOMY

"is on schedule," but he added that "it's going to take time yet before it finally gets to the price level."

Earlier, Nixon said the economy should be ready to accelerate a bit by mid-1970.

Nixon held out this prospect Friday in a sober economic report, forecasting relatively slow economic growth in the next few months—with a chance of a rise in unemployment.

But he said continuing his policy of firm restraints on the budget and the money supply "holds out the best hope of keeping that risk low."

Just before release of the economic report to Congress, Nixon told a White House news conference his new budget will be "a major blow in stopping the inflationary psychology."

"We are now in a position, a critical position, in which the decisions made in the next month or two will determine whether we win this battle," Nixon said.

In his economic report, the President said "a moderately quicker pace later in the year would be consistent with continued progress in reducing the rate of inflation." Such a pace probably could be spurred by a relaxing of money policies of the Federal Reserve under its Nixon-appointed chairman, Arthur F. Burnes.

"I'm not saying what the Federal ought to do," Nixon said at the news conference. But he said tight money could bring a recession and: "I think the time is coming when monetary policies can be relaxed."

Nixon said in the economic message that the ever present risk of greater unemployment while anti-inflation policies predominate are a good reason for Congress quickly to approve his proposals for improved manpower training, broader unemployment compensation and family assistance.

In addition to the danger of substantial unemployment, Nixon said, other situations to be avoided are a resurgence of inflation and a money squeeze so tight that already ailing housing industry might be paralyzed.

A balanced budget, he said, is the key weapon against all these. His budget going to Congress Monday will call for spending $200.771 billion, allowing for a surplus of $1.331 billion in the fiscal year starting next July 1, a $1.5 billion surplus has been projected for the current budget year ending June 30.

Nixon, listing his administration's guiding economic principles, gave top ranking to maintenance of a sound dollar not weakened by further inflation. A continually expanding economy was next on the list.

He called for more consistent government economic policies, without pushing "first the accelerator and then the brake pedal to the floor."

Nixon estimated the kind of policies he advocates would permit a moderate 5.5 per cent increase in the gross national product—the measure of goods and services produced—to a total of about $985 billion.

Corte Madera Boy Hurt In Accident

A 13-year-old Corte Madera boy was treated at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael yesterday for a broken arm suffered when his bicycle collided with an auto on Irwin Street, just south of Third Street, San Rafael.

Grant Gamba of 10 Navajo Lane struck the side of a car driven by Glenda E. Frost, 18, 30 Helens Lane, Mill Valley, according to San Rafael police.

road at a time in a "whipsaw" action.

"The whipsaw is to hit you from both sides until they get you bloody," Hiltz said.

Hiltz said shipments of perishable goods would be handled by supervisory crews or delivered to destinations to prevent spoilage.

"If requested by the Defense Department to handle special shipments, we would have to give it serious consideration," he said.

In Roanoke, Va., the Norfolk and Western Railroad announced it too would shut down all operations at 10 p.m. EST., unless the Union Pacific strike ends before then.

The company said all passenger and freight trains will halt and the shops and general offices at the railroad's headquarters will be closed except for some supervisory personnel.

Other railroads had not announced specific plans to cease operations but industry spokesmen said shortly after pickets first appeared in three Midwest cities that all the carriers would shutdown.

Union Pacific pickets first appeared in North Platte and Omaha, Neb., and Council Bluffs, Iowa, as members of four shop craft unions whose latest contract expired over a year ago walked off their jobs.

The Machinists, Boilermakers, Sheet Metal Workers and Electricians unions planned to strike only the Union Pacific, which operates over 9,500 miles of track in 13 western states.

The last nationwide railroad strike was July 16-17, 1967, when the same shopcraft unions walked off their jobs. An act of Congress sent them back to work while a five-man board headed by former Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., considered the matter for 90 days—during which mediation was unsuccessful. The board handed down a binding settlement.

That contract expired Jan. 1, 1969 when the current contract trouble began.

The Labor Department, which had been working for a peaceful settlement since a 60-day cooling off period imposed by President Nixon ended last month, had no immediate comment on the Union Pacific strike. But a spokesman for Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz said early this morning department officials would be meeting today to consider possible action to end the walkout.

Sanitary Board Studies Pensions

The Richardson Bay Sanitary District board has decided to study employee pension and retirement plans it has been receiving for the past several months and to accept no new proposals.

At its Thursday meeting, the board heard insurance broker James Hill present a retirement plan for district employees, who currently have no pension plans.

The board also met in closed session for two hours to acquaint new board members with complaints against several employees in the district, according to Douglas de la Fontaine, board president.

Use Of Building By Public Studied

A plan to turn the Bolinas community building over to a public agency was discussed at last night's meeting of the Bolinas Community Inc. board. According to Capt. David Edwards, board secretary, the move is being considered because of rising taxes, insurance and upkeep costs.

The board took no action, but agreed to discuss the plan further at its Feb. 27 meeting.

The board also discussed law enforcement problems in West Marin with sheriff's Sgt. Robert Bertram.

Pedestrian Hurt Walking Into Bus

A 27-year-old Mill Valley man sustained a concussion and a fractured jaw yesterday when hit by a Greyhound Bus on Shoreline Highway near the Highway 101 on-ramp.

The California Highway Patrol said Stephen Eliot Raskin, of 16 Bay View Road, "walked into the side of the slow moving bus," which was driven by Mildred I. Stahl, 36 Echo Avenue, Corte Madera. The accident occurred about 6:30 p.m.

Raskin was listed in fair condition in Marin General Hospital's intensive care unit.

Sue A. McDowell, 129 Canal Street, reported to San Rafael police yesterday the theft of a battery from her car while the vehicle was parked at the apartment building where she lives.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Reader Without Any Problems Writes About How Happy He Is

DEAR HELEN:

I was sitting here reading your column when it struck me. I should write you about my problems.

So I sat down with paper and pencil in hand and you know what! I couldn't think of one thing to write about.

So I'll write you anyway, and tell you how happy I am.—HAPPY

DEAR HAPPY: Yours is the best letter I've received in a month of Sundays. Thanks, friend.—H.

DEAR HELEN:

Judging from your letters, can you spot any new trends for teens?—CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS:

You won't believe this, but in a world that seems to be pulling away from the organized church, young people by the score are discussing their own personal faith in letters to me. Some of their religions aren't exactly orthodox, and many don't buy the Sunday worship bag. But they believe, and they aren't afraid to say so. They consider their God an everyday friend who helps with problems, approves the good they do, and doesn't condemn their failures. "He's groovy!" they tell me.

The following letter says it well:

Look, God, I have never spoken to you, but I want to say, "How do you do."

You see, God, they told me you didn't exist, and like a fool I believed all this.

Last night from a shell hole I saw your sky. I figured right then they had told me a lie.

Had I taken time to see things you made, I'd have known they weren't calling a spade a spade.

I wonder, God, if you shake my hand. Somehow, I feel you will understand.

Well, I guess there isn't much more to say, but I'm sure glad, God, I met you today.

I guess the zero hour will soon be here, but I'm not afraid since I know you're near.

The signal. Well, God, I'll have to go: I like you lots, this I want you to know.

Looks like this will be a horrible fight. Who knows, I may come to your house tonight.

Though I wasn't friendly to you before, I wonder, God, if you'd wait at your door?

Look, I'm crying. Me! Shedding tears! I wish I had known you these many years.

Well, I have to go now, God. Good-bye. Strange, since I met you, I'm not afraid to die.

This poem was found on the body of an American Serviceman, killed in action in Vietnam.—H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottell in care of the Independent-Journal.

Solid Color Fabrics, Low Flat Pleats Will Flatter Large Figure

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

From the pictures in the magazines and the articles about spring fashions, it looks as if the tunic length dress or the tunic effect is the newest thing. I am not too thin, and everytime I use pleats in my skirts they seem to open up and make me look twice as large. How can a size 18 look chic and not ridiculous?

MRS. B. B.

DEAR MRS. B. B.:

Believe it or not, there is usually a variation in every style garment that can be adapted successfully to each type of figure. You must be especially careful where the fullness or pleats begin on your dress. I would say they should only show about 6 to 9 inches from the hem. Also, flat pleats are more slenderizing than the ones that fan out.

As long as you are making your dress, use the pleats in front and back only. Avoid using them around the sides. One last tip is to avoid a horizontal break in the long line by using one color for the dress, not a combination of colors.

MRS. GERARD TARDIF Springfield, Mass., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her suggestion:

"When I buy or make a sweater for my children, I always put a loop tape at the bottom of the seam of the sleeve so they can hook this tape over the thumb of their hand before putting a coat on. Otherwise, as we all know, the sleeve of the sweater is pulled up into the sleeve of the coat, and it's almost impossible for them to work it back down by themselves."

DEAR EUNICE,

Is there a difference in the interfacing we should use today? My mother studied tailoring many years ago and used a very flexible hair canvas. You could actually see the hair woven into the fabric. The hair canvas I find today isn't as flexible and doesn't seem to have the same amount of hair in it.

MRS. G. T.

DEAR MRS. G. T.:

Yes, there are many types of hair canvas and intervacings. They should be varied depending on the style of the garment and the weight of the fabric as well as the construction technique to be used.

The type of hair canvas your mother used sounds like the type that is used in men's clothes. Formerly, it was used in tailoring suits and coats exactly the same as in men's clothing. This hair canvas couldn't be applied directly in the seams but had to be laboriously attached to tape. The tape was stitched into the seam because the hair canvas was so flexible it would prevent flat, smooth seams.

Today's construction is softer, more feminine, and it is no longer necessary to use the taping methods. Because of this, we also use a different type of interfacing that can be applied into your seams. This is a real help when you haven't the time or don't nedd the old method of construction. Be sure to get proper advice when you purchase your fabrics.

DEAR EUNICE,

I want to make a one-piece dress with a slight flare of white lace over black crepe. Do I treat this as one piece or make it like two dresses and let them both hang free? I have sewed quite a bit, but never with lace. Any hints would be helpful.

MRS. Y. S.

DEAR MRS. Y. S.:

This is a matter of choice and what part of the garment you want left unlined. Another factor is whether or not the lace has a finished scalloped edge to be used at the hem. If you wish to use the underlined effect to avoid being able to see the seams, you will have to hem the underlining separately. Then attach it in the side seams, ending just above the finished hem.

If you don't underline the lace at all, it will take on a softer look and appear more like a floater. Many of the young girls wear lace dresses over body stockings only for that semi-nude look.

Cardin's Sexy Fashions Expose The Body Demurely

By LUCIE NOEL

PARIS (AP) — Pierre Cardin mingled the sexy with the demure in his spring-and-summer fashion opening yesterday, presenting at least 10 creative ideas in dozens of different ways.

There is no nudity, but Cardin relies heavily on see-through effects for flitting exposures of the anatomy.

ANKLE-LENGTH sheaths are slashed at the front with a roundec cutaway section starting at the accepted mlnilength. The same treatment is shown with the slash in the back, with a plain front, so that legs are still very much in focus.

Again at the minilength point, he cuts ankle-length skirts into vertical maypole ribbons. They are sometimes looped to form harem trousers, or are simply banded at the hemline in a sort of bobble skirt cage.

He makes good use of flat loops in wide effects for mini peplums, or in narrow ribbon strips shown in tiers and forming the skirt which may be either mini or midi.

These spaced strips are used in necklines, spirally for skirts and for back decolletes. Round thongs of fabric like macaroni may form multiple shoulder-straps, see-through bibs on dress fronts and peekaboo effects in skirts.

MORE CONVENTIONAL are his ankle-length and midcalf ensembles in soft patchwork tweeds or pale crepes. The tweed went over plain jersey dresses, followed by a series of pastel-printed jersey sheaths with individual detailing.

The dozens of crepe dress and coat ensembles showed bars of color contrasts at their hemlines, sometimes repeated through the midriff or yoke of the dress. These were either pastel contrasts in pale tones or vivid shock colors.

Givenchy features the classic tailored suit. His jackets are waisted and shaped. Skirts fall to midcalf. His coats are smoothly and perfectly tailored. Seams and most effects are built in.

He likes white linen and synthetic weaves for daytime. A deep band often appears at the hemline. Alice blue is revived in velvet calf and shown in coats and suits. Edges are bound in satin in an embroidered effect.

SUMMER COATS go over pleated shirtwaist dresses in light crepes and small geometric patterns. A poncho pointed in the back and front belongs to many cocktail and evening models floral organizas or tiger printed chiffon.

Greek peasant dress is glamorized and is reflected in allover long sleeved silk dresses and in elaborate old embroideries on chiffon.

Gold ornaments adorn the coil of hair at the nape of the neck. Lavish coral embroidery cinches bare midriffs in a wide belt.

PARISIAN COUTURIER Pierre Cardin uses see-through and wide slit effects to expose the anatomy. The long black crepe gown, shown in a tendency sketch by Isola, is slit in the front and the back. The collar is of white vinyl.

USDA Prohibiting Use Of Paprika In Or On Federally Inspected Meat

The United States Department of Agriculture is amending federal meat inspection regulations to prohibit the use of paprika in or on fresh meat or meat products such as steaks; communited fresh meat food products like chopped and formed steaks or patties; or any other meat food products consisting of fresh meat. These products usually are sold in either chilled or frozen form at the retail level.

USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service said the decision was based on results of laboratory tests and other information which gave it reason to believe that the use of paprika, a weak flavored red pepper, can mask undesirable qualities in meat—especialy ground meat—by preserving the color characteristics after the meat has begun to spoil. USDA said evidence also indicates that paprika causes meat to appear leaner than it really is because it produces a reddish color in the fat in the meat.

USDA recieved over 100 comments on the proposal, most of these from consumer groups who supported the amendment.

Chorizo sausages, a Spanish sausage popular in Spanish, Mexican and Portuguese areas, and Italian (brand) sausage are exempt from the regulations. This is because USDA believes that consumers who buy these sausages generally expect to find paprika in them and do not generally depend on the color to show the freshness or quality of the products.

Economic Crisis Trigger Beatings

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI)—"I couldn't stand the baby's crying," mumured the father.

He was an unemployed laborer, and the doctor who had finally been called to treat his child had found evidence of broken bones and massive bruising that must have been inflicted deliberately.

The court sentenced the father to three months in jail, another in a growing number of prosecutions for cruelty to children.

Psychiatrists call it "the battered baby syndrome" and blame it on the rise in drug addiction and violence and is in his opinion a transient sign of the times. But he said it was definitely on the increase despite the feeling of some participants that it was merely getting more publicity.

The Home Office, for which Dr. Camps is pathologist, has a committee considering the problem, he said. Among its findings is the fact that unexplained tot deaths have risen in the past decade, and there has been an increase in murder charges against children under 10.

Most of the child victims of severe beatings come from the working class, he said, and the assailant is apt to be an unemployed father. The children are sometimes found to be otherwise well looked after. Dr. Camps appeared to be making the point that the attacks usually take place where tensions are aggravated by economic conditions. Persistent crying triggers the assault.

Dr. Louis Blom-Cooper of the University of London suggested that doctors be ordered to report to children's officers any attack on a child but that the offense be treated as social rather than criminal since it served no purpose to send the father away. Society ought to try to give the family help.

Miss Norris To Be Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Earl J. Norris of Tavares, Fla., have announced the engagement of their daughter, JoAnne Norris of San Jose, to Alan L. Berryhill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Berryhill of San Anselmo.

Charles F. Norris of Grosse Ile, Mich., is the future bride's brother. She was graduated from high school in Croswell, Mich., and from Eastern Michigan College of Commerce. JoAnne is employed by the First National Bank of San Jose.

Alan is the brother of Mrs. Bruno Michetti of San Rafael and Robert Berryhill of San Anselmo. A graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School and Heald's Business College, the future bridegroom is employed by Picker X-Ray in San Francisco. Mrs. J. F. Berryhill of San Rafael and C. H. Archer of Santa Rosa are his grandparents.

The couple plan a June wedding.

MISS AMELIA — Artist Weyman Lew makes a definite, often humorous statement by using the least amount of line drawing with an occasional startling bit of color in his exhibit at the deYoung Museum in Golden Gate Park.

Courthouse Parking Is Explained

Reports that the City of San Rafael was trying to "grab money" by renting parking spaces at the old courthouse were squelched yesterday by City Mgr. James H. McCown.

He said the rental has two purposes: revenue will offset the cost of the courthouse grounds and protect property owners in the area from possible additional taxation.

The city is trying to maintain the grounds, keep the lawns and hedges in good shape and remove litter, he said, and he asked for public cooperation.

McCown also said that when the courthouse was vacated by the county people immediately began parking in the empty lot, with the result that metered parking spaces in the area were left vacant.

If the situation continued, he said, it would have led to a drop in parking district revenue, in which case business property owners in the district would be liable, under state law, to an additional tax of up to 75 cents per $100 if revenue was insufficient to pay district bonds.

The downtown parking district is roughly bordered by D and First streets and Lincoln and Mission avenues.

Antilitter Model Bill Is Tabled

By TOM GUERIN
(Redwood High School)

SACRAMENTO — An attempt by the Marin delegation to a Model Legislature to introduce antilitter legislation has failed because the bill was tabled.

Steve Jensen of Sir Francis Drake High School said he hopes to rescue the measure, which would re-establish deposits on soft drink bottles and set deposits for beer cans and bottles, by rewriting it and steering it through the legislature, sponsored by the Young Men's Christian Association.

The proposal was designed to eliminate the vast number of cans and bottles which litter the state's highways and beaches.

Marin delegates to the legislature are Marsanne Milmoe, Lissa Hershheld and Guerin, Redwood High School; Jonnel Schmitz and Missy Crowell, San Rafael High School: Steven Jensen and Anne Gustaffson, Drake High School, and Sheryl Barnard and Judy Hartman, advisors.

Classic Film Set

D. W. Griffith's classic 1917 "Young Americans 1969," an art ing with the Civil War and Reconstruction, will be shown Monday at 7 p.m. in the Redwood High School little theater and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Room 52 of Keyser Hall, Tamalpais High School.

ART REVIEW

Lew Drawings Bring Joys To De Young

By LAURA DEVENDOR

SAN FRANCISCO — I don't know when I've had a better time looking at a show than at Weyman Lew's drawing exhibit, through Feb. 23 at the deYoung Museum in Golden Gate Park. Seldom does an artist say so much, so wittily, with so little effort. With just a few black lines, Lew builds thick, ripe, distored nudes which are always sculptural and usually sensuous or funny.

Lew doesn't seem to need much definition to create real archtypes of our enlightened era. With A few rippling lines and "Miss Amelia" evolves posing seductively, her undulating corpulence accentuated by a helmet, goggles and a dazzlingly patriotic scarf.

And coyness has seldom had a more outrageous portrait than in "Which Hand?" in which a fist-full of peacock feathers springs from behind the teasing lady's back as though they were growing there quite naturally on their own.

Lew is so much fun it seems tedious to mention that he has a tremendous way with design. Often he goes edge-of-the-paper with a figure, leaving the rest vacant. Or he doesn't complete the outline, tantalizing the mind's eye by omitting as much as he includes.

In about half, he adds a shot of color—blues, green, red, purple and orange, in polished toenails, a mop of orange hair, in neckties or in ornate lengths of drapery. The designs, epecially East Indian motifs, plus hair styles and the general uninhibited demeanor of the nudes all help establish a very Mod inflection. As a style it is pure entertainment, as a point of view it is devastating and together they leave you recalling everything in Lew's show with ease and lingering amusement.

Quite the opposite is true of Mill Valley artist Bette Klopf's work which is being shown through Feb. 6 at the Lucien Labaudt Gallery, 1407 Gough St. It is often difficult to register or remember what you have seen since there is so much hyperactive painting going on.

Mrs. Klopf does several things. She does a series of thick acrylic collage gardens, pleasantly overgrown with pretty-colored flower forms. She does unconnected things such as happenings under the sea or in a stripe-bordered, tangled garden. And she does a series of "Nature Circuits," the best of which are part clean, with printed electrical circuits, dials, wires and such and a part complex, with ominous, dark jungles of vegetation and prehistoric animals.

At times, however, her paintings go confusingly berserk and become too overdone to make a clear statement, to be looked at for long or to remember. Seen alone, each would look better. But Mrs. Klopf is in the added odd position of hanging next to work which is uncomplimentary and that work, unfortunately, is her own.

Film Ruled Not Legally Obscene

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The motion picture "Man and Wife" is not educational, but neither is it legally obscene, a Municipal Court judge has ruled.

Judge Harry W. Low on Thursday also ordered police to return prints of the film that they had seized last August at the Paris and North Beach theaters.

He dismissed charges against Tony Lo Cicero, 49, Paris theater manager who was arrested in the raid.

Defense attorney Jack Berman had argued the film was educational and had redeeming social value.

"As an educational film, any candid educator would say it flunked, or at best rates a D-minus," the judge declared, adding: "It is disgusting and objectionable to men as a private citizen."

Hub Sign Ordinance On Monday Agenda

The San Anselmo Planning Commission will continue its discussion of a proposed sign ordinance at its 8 p.m. meeting Monday.

The commissioners will also consider two requests for residential property setback variances for the construction of parking areas, and review the home use permit of a LaVerne P. Swaney, a dressmaker.

B52s Blast Viet Supplies In Laos Raids

SAIGON (AP) — American B52 bombers blasted North Vietnamese supply depots in Laos today with hundreds of tons of bombs in new raids aimed at slowing the movement of war materials into South Vietnam, officials sources said.

In ground action, allied troops fought North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers in a series of skirmishes from the western Mekong Delta to the demilitarized zone.

The allies said they killed 62 enemy soldiers in less than a dozen clashes. American losses were one killed and 13 wounded, spokesmen said. Field reports said 10 South Vietnamese troops were killed and 28 wounded.

Sources said the B52 raids in Laos were just across the border from the 25-mile-long A Shau Valley. The valley is held by the North Vietnamese and is used for moving war supplies into South Vietnam's northern provinces, which include the cities of Hue and Da Nang.

The strikers were about 100 miles south of the Mu Gia Pass, where an American fighter-bomber and a rescue helicopter were shot down Wednesday.

B52 bombers have made heavy raids during the past week against supply depots in both the A Shau and neighboring Laos.

Once upon a time a few years ago a lovely home was built on a large view lot in Mill Valley. It had 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths. Entertaining was a pleasure in the elevated view dining room, sunken living room with fireplace and bookshelves. And it so happened that the owner had to move and now this elegant home presently awaits a new owner. It even has a built in dramatic fish tank between the breakfast room and living room. Minimum maintenance grounds surround this home. A happy ending waits for $72,500.

COMPARE!

BUYING A HOUSE WITH RENTING AN APARTMENT OR WITH OWNING YOUR OWN APARTMENT HOME.

In today's highly mobile and changing society, an ever greater number of people are moving into apartments because of the advantages they offer. People today WANT to have a pool. They WANT to spend their leisure time doing things other than yard work and painting. In other words, the apartment dweller is wary of becoming a house buyer for he suspects that his house might absorb his time and money and end up owning him.

It is well known that the renter of an apartment is penalized for his freedom. His rent money isn't buying anything, whereas the homeowner's or apartment home-owner's payments are slowly but surely building up equity. Just as important, the homeowner and apartment homeowner get to deduct the taxes and interest he's paid out every month from his annual Federal Income Tax returns in April.

Hard To Find Horses On This Constellation

Auriga is also known as the Charioteer — and although the chariot is there and easy to see, it is hard to find a driver, horses or wheels in this constellation.

The most interesting star of this constellation is called Capella, also Alpha Aurigae. Capella means the Little She Goat, which the driver is supposed to be carrying.

To locate Auriga in the sky, face southward at 9 p.m. Standard Time and look at the region of the sky that is slightly south of overhead.

There is some confusion regarding the mythological setting for this figure. In some ancient star maps it was even pictured as a mule.

The representation of the Charioteer, chariot, goat, kids and driver is almost universal, but there the story seems to end, leaving us with many questions. Who is the driver? Is he a farmer or did he find the goat and kids by the wayside? Was he on his way to a war or on his way home from one? All these questions arise and we have no answers.

Alpha Aurigae is a faintly hellowish star and is the third brightest that can be seen from U.S. latitudes. It is about 16 times the diameter of the sun and more than 40 lightyears from the earth.

To complete the five sides of Auriga we had to borrow from the nearby figure of Taurus, called Beta Tauri.

Governor's Adviser Ready For Election

SACRAMENTO (AP) — One of Gov. Reagan's key political advisers says the 1970 election in California "could be very exciting — if we're careless."

Then he adds firmly, "We don't intend to be."

Reagan, still trim and handsome as he approaches his 59th birthday, confidently awaits renomination, intent only on tackling the problems of California and maintaining the image of an economy-minded chief executive.

But his strategists quietly have been planning the Republican governor's re-election campaign for months. The official announcement that Reagan will seek a second four-year term is expected in March.

Meanwhile, the state's major Democratic candidate officially in the running is Jesse M. Unruh, the 47-year-old Assembly Democratic leader who has been grooming for several years for a gubernatorial campaign.

The prospects were for a hot primary contest matching Unruh, the 1968 leader of Kennedy and McCarthy presidential forces in California, against San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who nominated Hubert H. Humphrey for president at the Democratic National Convention in 1968.

But Alioto bowed out of a potential race on Jan. 12 after his political future was dimmed by a Look magazine article alleging that he was involved with the underworld, and reports of fee sharing in a big lawsuit with the former attorney general of Washington State.

Alioto had been vigorously pushing his $12.5 million libel suit against Look. Unruh has said they thought the fee sharing — which Alioto contended was perfectly legal — hurt his image politically even more.

That seemingly left Democrats in a situation unusual for them: united behind one candidate early in the game.

But now they are looking over their shoulders at Sam Yorty, self-styled "maverick" mayor of Los Angeles. He says he may enter the primary campaign.

With no love lost between the official Democratic family and Yorty, who often winds up backing Republicans such as Richard Nixon, the state's top party leaders remain firmly behind Unruh.

Leon Cooper, Southern California Democratic chairman, said Yorty's only reason for running would be as a "spoiler" to Unruh's candidacy.

Yorty contends that Unruh "has placed himself so far to the left that he cannot win statewide office." Yorty challenged former Gov. Edmund G. Brown in the 1966 Democratic primary and gained nearly one million votes in his losing effort.

Democrats are prepared to argue, if Yorty runs, that he's being encouraged by Reagan forces. They would point out, for instance, that Henry Salvatori, one of Reagan's top financial supporters and "kitchen cabinet" members, was chairman of Yorty's re-election campaign last year.

Yorty replies, "As President Nixon put it, when you're a candidate, you're in the cat bird's seat. And I love being in the cat bird's seat."

And Salvatori told a reporter, "There's a vacuum on the Democratic side. It would be very tempting for a man like Yorty."

As for any Reagan-engineered "plot" to make things tough for Unruh by putting Yorty into the primary, Salvatori commented, "I don't think that makes sense. The mayor is stronger than Unruh. He would be a more formidable candidate in the general election. I would have no urge to see him run."

Salvatori added: "There's no question: I'm supporting Governor Reagan."

Cooper said, "The party is pretty well united behind the candidacy of Jesse. Yorty wouldn't have any effect on the party working together. It would force the waste of party funds and campaign funds in a primary that could only bring anything to the campaign."

Cooper added, "I think we've got a job to do now. That job is to beat Reagan and we've got to move in that direction. We don't want to get sidetracked."

Old Stones Asked For Transit Plaza

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Stones from an 800-year-old Spanish monastery may be used in one of the modern plazas of the Bay Area Rapid Transit system.

Bernard Averbuch, a San Francisco developer, has written to William Randolph Hearst Jr. asking permission to use the stones, which have been gathering moss in Golden Gate Park for nearly 40 years, to decorate the BART plaza.

The monastery — removed stone by stone from Spain in 1931 and shipped to San Francisco—was given the city by Hearst's father.

Robber Sentenced To Institution

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO—Christopher Mason, 19, has been sentenced to an indeterminate sentence of up to five years in a juvenile correctional institution for the Aug. 13 robbery of the United California Bank in San Rafael.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter handed down the sentence Thursday. Mason, of 737 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael, pleaded guilty to the charge Nov. 7 and was sentenced at that time to 60 days in jail by the judge, who left open the possibility of a heavier penalty.

Mason's final sentence depends on his progress at the correctional facility.

His companion in the robbery, John (Lucky Nelson, 19, of Burbank, was sentenced Nov. 7 to two concurrent terms of from four to six years in prison by Judge Carter.

Jewelry Stolen

A thief entered the board room of the San Rafael School Administration Building Wednesday and stole a display box of jewelry, according to owner Jack L. Michalak of 827 Pine Lane, San Rafael. police reported yesterday. No value was set on the jewelry.

Snow Trip Set

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor a snow trip to Squaw Valley for seventh and eighth grade students on Feb. 12. Reservation deadline is Feb. 9 and reservations may be made with playground leaders.

David Eisenhower In Naval Reserve

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Eisenhower, grandson of President Nixon and grandson of the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower, enlisted today in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

David, 21, took a formal oath placing him in the reserve at an informal ceremony at the White House with the President and David's wife, Julie, by his side.

Hard To Find Horses On This Constellation

Auriga is also known as the Charioteer — and although the chariot is there and easy to see, it is hard to find a driver, horses or wheels in this constellation.

The most interesting star of this constellation is called Capella, also Alpha Aurigae. Capella means the Little She Goat, which the driver is supposed to be carrying.

To locate Auriga in the sky, face southward at 9 p.m. Standard Time and look at the region of the sky that is slightly south of overhead.

There is some confusion regarding the mythological setting for this figure. In some ancient star maps it was even pictured as a mule.

The representation of the Charioteer, chariot, goat, kids and dirver is almost universal, but there the story seems to end, leaving us with many questions. Who is the driver? Is he a farmer or did he find the goat and kids by the wayside? Was he on his way to a war or on his way home from one? All these questions arise and we have no answers.

Alpha Aurigae is a faintly hellowish star and is the third brightest that can be seen from U.S. latitudes. It is about 16 times the diameter of the sun and more than 40 light-years from the earth.

To complete the five sides of Auriga we had to borrow from the nearby figure of Taurus, called Beta Tauri.

Governor's Adviser Ready For Election

SACRAMENTO (AP) — One of Gov. Reagan's key political advisers says the 1970 election in California "could be very exciting — if we're careless."

Then he adds firmly, "We don't intend to be."

Reagan, still trim and handsome as he approaches his 59th birthday, officially remains a noncandidate, intent only on tackling the problems of California and maintaining the image of an economy-minded chief executive.

But his strategists quietly have been planning the Republican governor's re-election campaign for months. The official announcement that Reagan will seek a second four-year term is expected in March.

Meanwhile, the only major Democratic candidate officially in the running is Jesse M. Unruh, the 47-year-old Assembly Democratic leader who has been grooming for several years for a gubernatorial campaign.

The prospects were for a hot primary contest matching Unruh, the 1968 leader of Kennedy and McCarthy presidential forces in California, against San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto, who nominated Hubert H. Humphrey for president at the Democratic National Convention in 1968.

But Alioto bowed out of a potential race on Jan. 12 after his political future was dimmed by a Look magazine article alleging that he was involved with the underworld, and reports of fee sharing in a big lawsuit with the former attorney general of Washington State.

Alioto had been vigorously pushing his $12.5 million libel suit against Look. Observers said they thought the fee sharing — which Alioto contended was perfectly legal — hurt his image politically even more.

That seemingly left Democrats in a situation unusual for them: united behind one candidate early in the game.

But now they are looking over their shoulders at Sam Yorty, self-styled "maverick" mayor of Los Angeles. He says he may enter the primary campaign.

With no love lost between the official Democratic family and Yorty, who often winds up backing Republicans such as Richard Nixon, the state's top party leaders remain firmly behind Unruh.

Leon Cooper, Southern California Democratic chairman, said Yorty's only reason for running would be as a "spoiler" to Unruh's candidacy.

Yorty contends that Unruh "has placed himself so far to the left that he cannot win statewide office." Yorty challenged former Gov. Edmund G. Brown in the 1966 Democratic primary and gained nearly one million votes in his losing effort.

Democrats are prepared to argue, if Yorty runs, that he's being encouraged by Reagan forces. They would point out, for instance, that Henry Salvatori, one of Reagan's top financial supporters and "kitchen cabinet" members, was chairman of Yorty's re-election campaign last year.

Yorty replies, "As President Nixon put it, when you're a candidate, you're in the cat bird's seat. And I love being in the cat bird's seat."

And Salvatori told a reporter, "There's a vacuum on the Democratic side. It would be very tempting for a man like the mayor."

As for any Reagan-engineered "plot" to make things tough for Unruh by putting Yorty into the primary, Salvatori commented, "I don't think that makes sense. The mayor is stronger than Unruh. He would be a more formidable candidate in the general election. I would have no urge to see him run."

Salvatori added: "There's no question: I'm supporting Gov. Gov. Reagan."

Cooper said, "The party is pretty well united behind the candidacy of Jesse. Yorty wouldn't have any effect on the party working together. It would force the waste of party funds and campaign funds in a primary that isn't going to bring anything to the campaign."

Cooper added, "I think we've got a job to do now. That job is to beat Reagan and we've got to move in that direction. We don't want to get sidetracked."

Can Unruh beat Reagan?

The governor's political advisers say their polls indicate the Republican chief executive's popularity remains very high. They say a major problem is to keep campaign workers from being overconfident.

Thomas Reed, the Republican national committeeman from California and Reagan's former appointments secretary, says Reagan now has "enormous strength."

"But nobody is unbeatable, or virtually unbeatable," Reed added.

"If you're hungry and want to eat, you can get in if the other guy is fat and careless. This could be a very exciting year if we're careless. We don't intend to be," Reed said.

A public opinion poll conducted last November by professional pollster Mervin Field showed Reagan leading Unruh 56 per cent of the vote to 34 per cent.

But Unruh's aides released last week a private poll conducted for Alioto that, they said, showed Unruh only trailing by 47.8 per cent to 43.5 per cent with 8.7 per cent undecided.

Alioto officials confirmed the results, but they noted it was the only poll of its sort conducted and was not one in a series — and thus it was difficult to compare it to any other poll or interpret the figures.

Alioto officials said the poll did show them that there was "slippage" in Reagan's popularity.

Cooper said other polls indicate "some weaknesses in Reagan" adding he didn't think the governor would run away with the contest.

All observers acknowledged, too, that events between now and election time could alter the outlook.

42 Billboards Ordered Down

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 1965 Monterey County ordinance requiring removal of 42 billboards owned by National Advertising Co. was upheld by a 4-3 decision of the State Supreme Court.

The high court ruled Friday that the county government had authority to order removal of the billboards, which no longer conform to zoning restrictions, after initial costs of the billboards have been amortized.

The opinion said these costs can be recovered in periods of from 10 to 25 years and rejected the argument of National Advertising that maintenance and other factors should be added to initial costs.

Robber Sentenced To Institution

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO—Christopher Mason, 19, has been sentenced to an indeterminate sentence of up to six years in a juvenile correctional institution for the Aug. 13 robbery of the United California Bank in San Rafael.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter handed down the sentence Thursday. Mason, of 737 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael, pleaded guilty to the charge Nov. 7 and was sentenced at that time to 60 days in jail by the judge, who left open the possibility of a heavier penalty.

Mason's final sentence depends on his progress at the correctional facility.

His companion in the robbery, John (Lucky Nelson, 19, of Burbank, was sentenced Nov. 7 to two concurrent terms of from four to six years in prison by Judge Carter.

Old Stones Asked For Transit Plaza

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Stones from an 800-year-old Spanish monastery may be used in one of the modern plazas of the Bay Area Rapid Transit system.

Bernard Averbuch, a San Francisco developer, has written to William Randolph Hearst Jr. asking permission to use the stones, which have been gathering moss in Golden Gate Park for nearly 40 years, to decorate the BART plaza.

The monastery — removed stone by stone from Spain in 1931 and shipped to San Francisco—was given the city by Hearst's father.

PAWS THAT NEED REFRESHING

Workmen had just finished pouring the concrete sidewalk in front of a downtown Enid, Okla., store and looked back to admire their work just in time to see seven dogs romp through it. It meant more work for the crewmen, and laughs for motorists who happened by the scene at the moment.

Rejoining ABAG OnCouncilAgenda

The prospects of returning to membership in the Association of Bay Area Governments will be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Sonoma County Supervisor Ignazio A. Vella of Sonoma, who is running unopposed for Association president, is to explain why membership would be beneficial to the city. The council withdrew from membership in July of 1968.

The council will also receive a letter from the Petaluma Planning Commission stating unanimous opposition to the disclosure of assets law. The library board of trustees had also registered a protest and forecast mass resignations if the law is enforced.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Under-Use Of Body Causes Troubles As We Grow Older

VAN DELLEN

Modern living with all its timesaving gadgets is not all it is cracked up to be. In a sedentary existence, the worker is plagued with aches, pains, and fatigue because he is getting soft.

His muscles, including those of the heart, are called upon to do as little work as possible, and as a result, he tires easily on extending himself.

Youngsters start out well but they fail to follow through. Muscular tone and good circulation are developed through sports and play but in order to reap the benefits, physical activity must be continued after age 25.

Most young men and women fall prey to the easy life with its labor-saving devices designed to eliminate activity and stress.

Many men have jobs requiring very little physical exertion. Consequently, through disuse, the limbs and back become stiff and sore after cleaning the yard or shoveling a little snow.

The heart muscle has no reserve and most of us find ourselves panting after running up a flight of stairs or dashing 50 feet to catch a bus.

Aches and pains encountered on exertion are tolerable at first, but age accentuates them. Their effects on the internal organs may be more serious, and it is possible that our softness contributes to the increasing incidence of heart attacks and strokes.

All activity lessens with age but when our muscles are utilized to their fullest extent, the decline is less rapid. Muscular tissue, including that of the heart, can be kept in good condition only through use. Muscles that are accustomed to work perform better than idle muscles. Those that have grown lax respond to exercise by gaining in strength and, in time, are capable of accomplishing most activities with ease.

Many people recuperating from a prolonged illness complain about weakness and lack of strength. This is understandable because increasing muscular strength is not a spontaneous process; exercise is required.

Hospital Blood Tests

S. R. writes: I've heard that there are 60 different types of blood tests. What kinds are given in hospitals?

REPLY

Up to 60, depending upon the size of the lavoratory and availability of required equipment. The physician orders the tests he needs to help him make the diagnosis or as a follow-up on treatment. The newer multiphasic testing units may increase the number of procedures done for screening purposed.

Hot Flashes At 66

F. I. writes: Can a woman of 66 be in the change? I still have hot flashes followed by sweats.

REPLY

No, but hot flashes may appear 20 years before and 20 years after the menopause. Flushes are of neurovascular origin and are not always associated with the change of life.

X-Raying Wood

D. T. writes: Would X-ray show a wooden or plastic splinter in the foot, or are only metal objects visualized?

REPLY

Metallic splinters always show, whereas plastic and wood are less likely to do so.

Endometriosis

Mrs. N. writes: Can endometriosis exist without symptoms?

REPLY

Yes, depending upon how much uterine tissue exists outside the womb and where it is located.

Novato Slates Joint Session On Park Site

Details of the proposed purchase of 428 acres for a park from J. C. Garlick will be discussed with him at 8 p.m. Monday in the Novato Community House at a joint meeting of the Novato City Council, parks and recreation commission and city department heads.

The offer by Garlick to sell half the 850-acre ranch west of San Marin High School including portions of Bowman Canyon was announced at Tuesday's council meeting. The proposal was that the city purchase half the ranch for $500,000. This is the same price as the 67-acre O'Hair Ranch at Novato Boulevard and Sutro Avenue which the city is considering buying for a park.

Carmel Officials Fight Asset Law

CARMEL (UPI) — Fourteen Carmel city officials say they will resign rather than comply with a new state law on disclosure of their assets.

They included three councilmen, four planning commissioners, four cultural commissioners, two forestry commissioners, three Library Board members and one department head.

The City Council voted Friday to join a suit against the state challenging the constitutionality of the law, written by Assemblyman Jess Unruh and adopted by the last legislature.

Bridges Keep Closing Off California River Travel

AT THE VERY TIME when recreational use of inland waterways is mushrooming, forces are at work inexorably foreclosing the future use of many of California's navigable rivers and sloughs.

On the one hand, you have only to count boats on trailers on holiday weekends to know first-hand about the explosive growth of small boating.

On the other hand, you have only to read Coast Guard public notices on granting of permits for fixed, low-level bridges to see first-hand how navigable streams are being effectively closed to recreational traffic.

Just a year ago in this space, this warning appeared:

"The public interest would best be served by a moratorium on fixed bridge buiilding over navigable streams so as to leave the door open for future dredging and restoration to navigational use of (our) beautiful and historic inland waterways by future generations of recreational boaters."

That provoked a negative response from the Coast Guard admiral in charge of granting bridge permits in Northern California.

A spokesman for the admiral's office exposed his ignorance by insisting that a bridge over the beautiful Mokelumne River on Galt Road near Thornton couldn't possibly interfere with navigation because there never had been any commercial navigation of the river that far up.

COAST GUARD officers would be well advised to study the history of the areas with whose future they are entrusted.

If they did, they would know that such as Capt. John Leale steamed the Mokelumne all the way to Lodi in his large commercial vessel. It is told in his memoirs, "Life of a Tule Sailor."

The Coast Guard now has before it an application for fixed bridges across the Mokelumne at points 23.3 and 24 miles above its confluence with the San Joaquin.

These bridges presently exist and under present regulations are required to be opened on two days notice, for the passage of vessels which cannot pass beneath them.

The applications are a little tricky. They don't specify a fixed bridge. They merely provide that the regulations would be modified to read, "The draws of these brides need not be opened for the passage of vessels."

Perhaps that wording is aimed to comfort those of us who decry fixed bridges over navigable streams. But a fixed bridge by any other name . . . etc.

The effect is the same. When recreational boating expands up the Mokelumne, a fixed bridge will determine the point at which recreational use will be effectively halted. Beyond that point, a dredge cannot navigate to keep the waters navigable. Silt and debris will accumulate. The beautiful river of yesteryear will be replaced by smelly swamp.

THE BRIDGES INVOLVED in this newest application have not been opened for navigation since 1951. To a person who doesn't see the picture in its longest and broadest perspective, this might sound like an argument in favor of not requiring future openings.

It would be more logical to reason that if the applicants haven't been required to open the bridges since 1951, they don't need permission to keep them closed.

In any event, it is more important to look ahead than behind. Looking at the expansion of recreational boating, it is obvious that the restoration of the Mokelumne and other rivers as easily navigated waterways should not be impeded by the granting of permits for man-made obstacles.

Let us hope the Coast Guard will have the vision to perceive the longer, larger context. Let us hope the Coast Guard awakens to the need to preserve public navigational access to California's beautiful and historic inland waterways.

Matters of Urgency

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Ways To Move People—Not Cars

In regard to the Golden Gate Bridge toll and the commuter questions in general, everyone is entitled to their opinion. The GG Bridge directors voiced theirs (at the commuters' expense) when they raised the commute toll in order to go into the transit business. They again will voice their opinion at the meeting on Feb. 5. I hope to be joined by a couple thousand of my fellow commuters. For whether you have a say in what happens, you will have to pick up the tab for it. So come and listen and be heard.

In the meantime, as "food for thought," I would like to submit what I believe to be the three basic alternatives to the problem, which is to move people (not necessarily cars) in and out of San Francisco.

1. Build more freeways - this will invite more people to use more cars and in a short time bring us right back where we are now.

2. Attempt to make better use of the existing freeway and the Bridge by a general staggering of business hours in San Francisco.

3. Get some of the cars off of the freeway. If half of the people traveling alone during commute hours were to double up, it could remove upwards of 10,000 cars from 101 during this time period.

A transit system could do it, but in order to be attractive, the system must be completely independent of the rest of the commuter traffic and able to make almost as good time as a car traveling during non-commute hours. The "Greyhound type" under any other name has been proven unsatisfactory.

Unruh 'Friend Of Little Man'?

Your paper quotes Jess Unruh as chiding Governor Reagan on his firm opposition to the withholding of state income taxes.

Aren't the Democrats supposed to be champions of the little man? Doesn't Ex-Mr. Speaker know that withholding will hit mainly the average wage earner? It isn't the big incomes, well known to the state, that may be avoiding income taxes. That $120 million a year now being avoided will come from Mr. Average Wage Earner, not from the big bad fat cats. (Incidentally, wasn't the estimate formerly about $60 million? The fish that got away gets bigger with the telling.)

Governor Reagan believes that the taxpayer should be well aware of every tax he pays — not lulled into a sort of unconciousness of the personal cost to him of his government. He believes that taxes should be hard to collect so the llegislators and government burearcrats will find taxes hard to assess and impose on the taxpayer. He has consistently warned that taxes cannot be controlled — the state cannot print money as Washington can. He hopes that a taxpayer — fully aware of the taxes he is paying — will remember that "so-and-so legislator" who sponsored another bill to spend his hard-earned money.

Tam Board Action Destroys Respect

Your article reporting the action of the Tamalpais High School Board of Trustees in approving Redwood High School athletic department rules for grooming surely helped to remove a significantly amount of respect that county residents might still have had for this board. According to the article, the set of rules definitely violated the intent of the board's policy as stated by District Supt. Robert D. Torrey. In addition, Trustee Gloria Malbostad disagreed with the rule but she felt she had no mandate to force her views on the community. This obviously ignored the fact that she must have been elected in the first place because of her views. Further, Trustee Frank Miller only voted for the rule "to bring peace" can this be when legal and court action will obviously follow attempt at inforcing this rule is diffucult to see. It seems rather that an individual could claim voting either way would be done to "bring peace." It seems much more likely that the individual coaches discretion as suggested by the superintendent's office would have been much more likely to "bury the issue" and bring peace.

LINES ON LIVING

Love Can Do Mischief By Smothering Child

BY RABBI Haim Kemelman

Many of us use the word love to cover up a lot of mischief. We speak of love in the home and love of children. But love is really beside the point. It is only an emotion, a sentiment, and there are healthy emotions and sick emotions. Love, too, can be sick and sickening.

To be sure, love is what makes the home and love is the most important component of life, for us and our children. But love can be misguided, mismanaged and misspent. How much felicity can one shower without pampering, how much affection without spoiling? Love can also smother when it's a selfish expression of overextended parental mastery and servitude; for it can cause undue dependence upon parents.

True love is liberation and freedom, the release of personal fulfillment - not its subjugation. And if love demands the sacrifice of the individual spirit, it's a miscarriage. Because intelligent love requires of us to love not only with the heart but also with the mind.

LOVE! But let live! Don't smother the sapling offspring with the giant shadows of your sprawling branches of overcoverage and overprotection.

When we love to domineer, to possess, to perpetuate our own ego in our offspring, we really love ourselves more than the child. The punishment to the child can be the lifetime penalty Samuel Butler spoke of being "compelled by unkind fate to parental servitude for life...a form of penal servitude" of the worst kind.

Like anything good, love of children has to be planned and worked at deliberately and patiently. It's not a part-time job. And when we take a short-cut in the home, we take a detour to adequate parenthood - we cut short the childhood of our children that they desperately need.

SADLY, restlessness of haste and speed of our time have come upon childhood too. Children today are left with themselves for long periods of time and when they see their parents, they find them tension-laden, anxiety-ridden. Thus, while a father says "I want my child to have the things I didn't have," he often leaves him without the thing he needs most - fatherhood, a father real to the child in living and in relating.

Perhaps some of these fathers, who complain that nothing much was given to them as children, forget that they have been fortunate to gain a lot more than they are capable of giving their own children - the warmth of closeness and intimacy: the gift of a father who shares experiences to make the world of the child real and exciting. For one room of parenthood is worth more than a whole world of things and one corner of a home is more precious than a sumptuous and empty house.

Too many children today have no childhood. They are pushed into maturity immaturely. The girl in the tiny teens who wears lipstick and a long gown, stumbling upon her high heels, is more often the expression of her mother's anxiety to see her daughter become popular, than the child's wish to masquerade in grown-up fashion.

At Least We Don't Shoot Robins

When we are about to give up hope for mankind, someone does a kind deed or we learn that things were just as bad or worse a hundred years ago, and we feel that maybe, after all, man is slowly clutching his way up out of the mire and becoming civilized.

Today, at least, we don't slaughter robins, except unintentionally with pesticides. Not so in Audubon's time. In his "Birds of America," which was published in 1840, he wrote about robins:

"In all the southern states . . . their presence is productive of a sort of jubilee among the gunners, and the havoc made among them with bows and arrows, blowpipes, guns, and traps of different sorts, is wonderful. Every gunner brings them home by bagsful, and the markets are supplied with them at a very cheap rate. Several persons may at this season stand round the foot of a tree loaded with berries, and shoot the greater part of the day, so fast do the flocks of robins succeed each other. They are then fat and juicy, and afford excellent eating."

With all this going on, it's a wonder robins didn't go the way of the passenger pigeon and the Carolina parrakeet. Today, we don't know anyone who would condone such killing.

Sharp-Eyed Birds--Low IQ

Experiments on the power of sight in animals have shown that birds possess by far the most efficient eyes. Birds' eyes are huge for their body weight.

In fact, most of the room inside a bird's skull is occupied by its two eyeballs, a very small portion of which are visible. This leaves very little room for brains.

The ostrich has the biggest eyes of any land animal, and they weigh more than twice as much as its brain. The eyes of the red-tailed hawk are in similar proportion to brain size.

We can assume, therefore, that while they rate 20-20 for eyesight, most birds flunk IQ tests. It is an assumption that happens to be true.

And my third rule, possibly most important: when the President asks you a question, remember that he doesn't know the answer either!"

MARQUIS CHILDS

Nixon Veto Great Performance But Does Little To Inflation

WASHINGTON—The political magic that President Nixon can work on television was brilliantly illustrated in his veto for the $19.7 billion appropriation bill for health, education and welfare. Even his sourest opponents conceded that it was a masterful performance.

Aside from the skill of the performance—that stroke of the pen with perhaps 30 million Americans looking on—the President had a lot going for him. The heart of the dispute, the $600 million for aid to districts with schools overcrowded with government and defense workers, is the kind of crutch that should long since have been discarded for a rational over-all plan. The President promises such a plan.

BUT SO FAR as the spiral of inflation is concerned, the dispute is an empty charade. The President might have signed the bill, since there is nothing in the law that could compel him to spend appropriated money above what he deemed right and reasonable. Several presidents have simply refused to spend funds above levels they have set independent of Congress. This, however, would have deprived Mr. Nixon of the televised sortie on the dragon of inflation.

Prices are rising steadily and dramatically as the President looks the other way. Five days before his dramatic veto, United States Steel announced a 4.6 per cent price increase on 16 per cent of all steel products.

Last August, steel producers announced a price increase of 4.8 per cent on other products. These are the components going into motorcars, refrigerators, all the goods that are part of the affluent society. The price rise is passed on at once to the consumer.

The auto manufacturers have warned of price increases in 1970, even though production has dropped 6 per cent and there is a big inventory of unsold cars. Walter Reuther, head of the United Auto Workers Union, is laying the groundwork for new wage demands when the UAW contract expires in September. This will send the price of autos up again. Such wage increases are passed on automatically despite Reuther's statistical argument that the companies could absorb them and still show a generous profit.

HERE IS THE RAW fuel of inflation. The price rise for December was .6 of one per cent nationwide. That chilled the optimism of those who had been saying the rate of increase was slowing. The over-all rise for 1969 was 6.1 per cent, a record since the big bulge of 1951 and the start of the Korean War.

Medical costs are skyrocketing. They increased .7 of one per cent in December. Food costs are likely to climb in the weeks ahead because of the effect of the severe winter on Florida fruit and vegetable crops.

The President is aiming for a thin surplus in the budget for the fiscal year 1971. That is the Republican formula for curing inflation and restoring fiscal responsibility. In his State of the Union message Mr. Nixon blamed the Democratic deficits of the '60s, a total of 57 billion, for the price spiral.

But, in light of the raw fuel let loose in the economy, budget balancing is a doubtful remedy. It is difficult to believe that it can have the slightest effect in the current calendar year.

MR. NIXON abandoned the Johnson wage-price guidelines. Certainly, they had begun to fray out. He scorns the jawboning of the Kennedy-Johnson years when both industry and labor were taken to the woodshed for stern exhortation.

The only visible answer, therefore, is wage and price control or some equivalent form of restraint. In private even some of the Nixon advisers are beginning to say that this may be the only choice left. And the hour is very late.

The President can continue to put the blame on the Democrats. They simply followed the line of least resistance in the 385 congressional districts that get federal school aid on the "impacted area" basis. But that is not an answer to the ravage of inflation, with the fearful cost in every department of life.

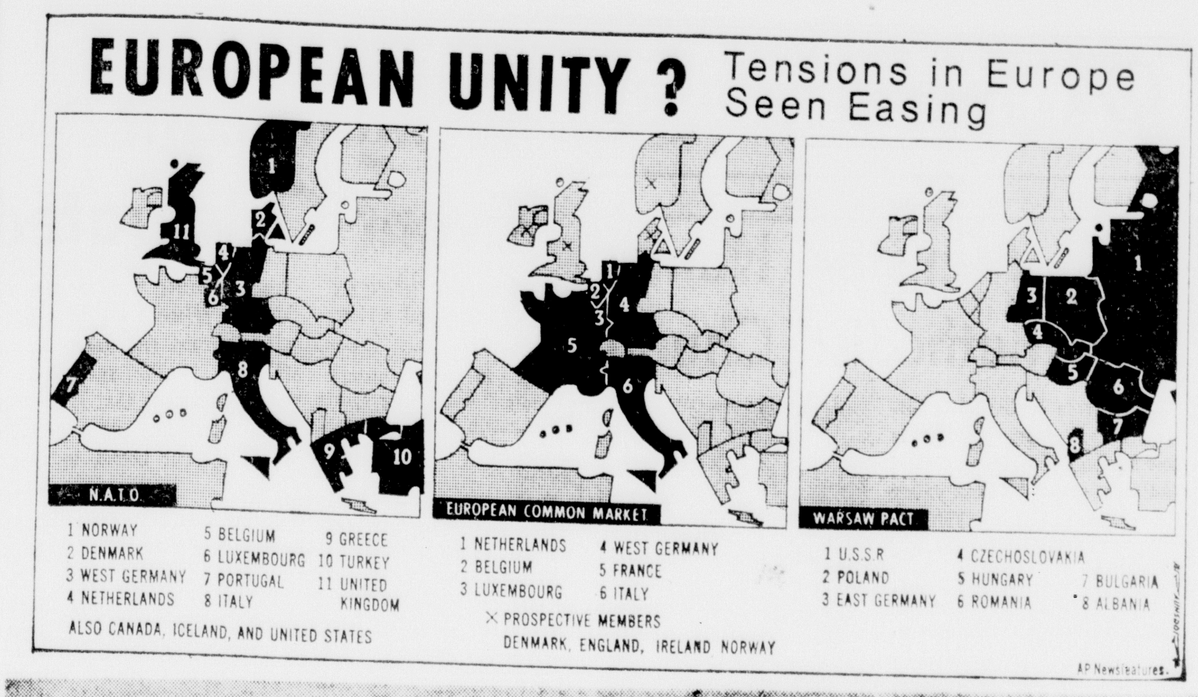
Would we mind Lester Lanin's orchestra playing here?...Of course not. He plays for all our affairs."



Europe's Mood Easing

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

For the first time since World War II, all of Europe's major nations and power blocs appear to be close to speaking terms with each other at the same time.

West Germany and the Soviet Union are busy negotiating an agreement to renounce the use of force. West Germany also is on the verge of starting talks with the Communist satellite nations of Poland and Czechoslovakia. And, wonder of wonders, East and West Germany have exchanged notes exploring the possibility of starting talks.

Now that Charles De Gaulle no longer is the president of France, objections to British membership in the European Common Market seem to have evaporated. And the economic alliance, consisting at present of France, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, Belgium and the Netherlands, appears to be on the verge of admitting Ireland, Norway and Denmark, as well as the traditionally opposed England.

The Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact associates have invited Western European nations to participate in a European security conference, and North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies meeting last December in Brussels approved a resolution which did not rule out the Communist proposal.

Although the flurry of diplomatic activity is, on some fronts, only tentative, at this point, the very fact that traditional opponents are talking publicly about talking with each other is heartening to those who would like to see a reduction in European tension.

The West German talks with the Soviet Union, actually, are rather one-sided. The Russians, as a condition for membership in the United Nations, already have agreed to renounce the use of force. Although it is questionable whether the Soviets have adhered to the agreement, it is on record. West Germany, since it is not a United Nations member, has not signed the U.N. agreement to forego force. But by negotiating such an agreement with the Soviet Union, the Bonn government hopes to set the stage for greater cooperation with the Eastern nations, including closer economic ties.

Talks between the West Germans and Poland, which governments of both countries have indicated they favor, would center on Polish demands that West Germany recognize the legality of Poland's seizure at the end of World War II of German territories east of the Oder-Neisse rivers.

And West Germany, in response to a Czech invitation, has declared it is willing "at any time" for talks with the Prague government aimed at establishing normal diplomatic relations between the two countries.

An East German call for talks with West Germany contains demands previously rejected by West Germany that the Bonn government recognize East Germany as a separate nation and that West Berlin be set up as an independent state, with formal recognition from both East and West Germany.

The West German reply skirted the issue of the Communist demands. West German President Gustave Heinemann wrote he was passing the East German proposal to the coalition government of Socialist Chancellor Willy Brandt. It was expected the Bonn government would agree to the talks, but not to the Berlin government's demands for formal recognition.

No date has been set for talks on admitting new members to the European Common Market, but a French representative has indicated the negotiations could start by the middle of 1970. Former President De Gaulle blocked British membership for years, following Britain's refusal to join the Common Market when it was first formed. With De Gaulle no longer on the scene, it is more likely than ever that Britain will get in.

The Communist bloc nations recently issued a call for Western European nations to join them in a discussion of European security. The Communists said they had in mind the renunciation of force by both sides and broadened technical and scientific cooperation between East and West.

The NATO nations recently approved a vague resolution with the counter-proposal that more meaningful issues be discussed, such as "mutual and balanced force reductions" by both sides in Europe. The resolution cautioned against a conference which would simply "ratify the present division of Europe."

This Week In The World

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

A Syrian jet fighter "boomer" Haifa this week in a rare demonstration of Arab air activity that caused some concern in Israel's big Mediterranean port.

The Soviet-built MIG21, sweeping low over the city, caused a sonic boom that shattered dozens of windows. No serious damage was reported.

Israeli jets promptly howled north to break windows in Damacus, Homs, Hama, Latakia and Aleppo, a chain of cities extending across Syria almost to the Turkish border.

The people of Haifa, however, were more concerned about the violation of their own air space than they were reassured by the Israeli counter-action. It was the first time an Arab warplane had been reported over an Israeli city since shortly before the 1967 war.

Even if it had been on a combat mission, the Syrian plane would have posed no serious threat to the city. The MIG21 is essentially an interceptor--a short-range fighter--and its normal armament consists of two 30-mm. (1.2-inch) guns and two air-to-air missiles similar to the U.S. Sidewinder.

No weapons were used in the MIG's pass over Haifa apart from the shock wave generated when it passed the speed of sound.

But the question was inevitably asked: If the MIG could make it to Haifa and back without being shot down, might not a jet bomber do the same?

Around the world, around the clock:

SAIGON — U.S. fighter-bombers attacked a missile battery 90 miles inside North Vietnam in retaliation for the shooting-down of an unarmed reconnaissance plane. It was the most serious air incident reported over North Vietnam since President Lyndon B. Johnson halted the bombing on Nov. 1, 1968.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon vetoed the $19.7-billion health and education bill, and supporters of the measure could not muster enough votes to override the veto. Nixon signed the veto message on television, during a speech in which he explained his reasons for rejecting the bill.

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Three suspects in the murders of mine union official Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski and his wife and daughter were indicted on conspiracy charges by a federal grand jury. Two other persons were named as co-conspirators but not as defendants.

CAIRO — Israeli warplanes attacked a target within six miles of the center of Cairo. Egypt charged that three civilians were killed and 12 wounded in the attack.

JOHANNESBURG — The government announced that Arthur Ashe, the Negro tennis player, will not be allowed to play in South Africa as an individual though he could come as a member of an American Davis Cup team if the situation should arise.

WASHINGTON — Charles DiBona, 37-year-old operator of a firm that does "think-tank" research for the Navy, was designated to succeed Gen. Lewis B. Hershey as director of the Selective Service System.

CHICAGO — Judge Julius J. Hoffman refused to allow former Attorney General Ramsey Clark to testify at the conspiracy trial of the "Chicago Seven," ruling that he could make "no relevant or material contribution."

PRAGUE — The Communist central committee designated Lubomir Strougal as premier of Czechoslovakia in place of Oldrich Cernick, a leader of the 1968 liberal reform movement.

ROME — The Chamber of Deputies passed and sent to the Senate a bill providing for the division of Italy into 14 regions, each with its own government and parliament. Communists are expected to dominate at least two of the proposed a dnsent to the Senate a bill providing for the regional regimes.

Behind The News

A TOUR GUIDED BY RED BOOK

Mao's China Is A Different World

By ADOLPH GABOR

CANTON (Toronto News Service) —You don't take the train to China, you walk across her border.

And in covering the 300 yards from Lu Wu, a small village in Hong Kong's New Territories, to Shum Chun on the other side, you enter a different world.

It is the world of Mao posters, flags and Mao statues; little and big red books and loudspeakers that seldom stop, making the two hour train journey from border to Canton, a ride in a revolutionary discoteque.

CLEAN, DRAB CITY

Canton, or Kwan Chow, its proper Chinese name, is a sprawling city of three million. Its streets are wide and very clean, but even the hundreds of red posters, and the many red flags carried by marching children, can't change its drab appearance: For everyone is dressed the same.

I spent 12 days in Canton and the surrounding countryside. Since most of our time was taken up by scheduled and strictly supervised visits to factories, communes, hospitals and schools, I could only see those aspects of Chinese life that my guide-interpreter and the various revolutionary committees I encountered wanted me to see.

They showed me a programmed, Orwellian world, working from a box, towards a goal.

MAO'S WORD LAW

In post Cultural Revolution China, "Mao Tse-tung Thought" is the framework of life, a law and philosophy not to be questioned, only practiced and obeyed. Personal opinions are either non-existent, or not expressed, and all questions are answered with a quote.

"Maintaining our independence, keeping the initiative in our own hands and relying on our own efforts," is the most important quotation these days. It is the slogan, which is said to provide the motivation to restore China's economy, which has suffered by the Cultural Revolution.

To most westerners the Cultural Revolution means Red Guards prowling the streets, violence and a power struggle in the upper echelon of the Chinese Communist Party.

But according to the Chinese, or at least the people I was allowed to talk with, its importance is second only to China's liberation in 1949.

SOCIETY IN PERIL?

The Chinese hold, that after only 17 years of socialism bourgeois values were threatening their system and the classless society was once again catering to a minority. The minority of specialists— a term used for all professional people — who were gradually losing touch with the working millions.

The power of these specialists had to be broken, if the new type of society was to survive.

Today, after three years of upheaval, the Cultural Revolution is over, and according to its supporters, has successfully served its purpose. Specialists today take turns in working on the fields, and in the factories, while workers and peasants are encouraged to do the job of doctors and engineers.

China's Khruschev, Liu Shiao-chi, the country's former president, the man who encouraged relaxation and Western type specialization, has been ousted. Today he is regarded as the symbol of bourgeois evil, opposing a now singularly powerful God.

Chairman Mao's works have been widely distributed, his power secured; political indoctrination is stressed to a degree unexperienced by any other society.

GIGANTIC FARM

Visiting the East Wind People's Commune, south of Canton, was the first stop of our guided tour.

It is a unique, gigantic agricultural community — covering thousands of acres of land, equipped with factories, hospitals and giving home at times to 100,000 people. While its basic function is that of a co-operative farm, it is better described as an agricultural province, directed by a revolutionary committee.

The revolutionary committee that guides and directs all organs of the Chinese economy since the Cultural Revolution, is made up of People's Liberation Army members, leading political cadres, and elected representatives of the workers of the peasantry.

The East Wind commune I visited, is responsible for the cultivation of 27,925 acres of land; the 62,000 peasants living in the area, are divided into 25 production brigades and 371 production teams.

RICE, PEANUTS

Rice and peanuts are their main produce, but other than striving to increase their agricultural output, the commune's goal is to become self sufficient in all complimenting industries.

A fixed amount of their produce is turned over to the government. They receive cash, some of which is used for investment in new machinery and the rest is distributed among the members. If the commune surpasses its quota, the government's payment for the surplus is distributed the same way.

The establishment of the People's Communes in 1958 was one of China's first major steps away from the Soviet-type system, in which the land is owned and handled by large collective farms. But even though the communes were highly centralized, private enterprise reappeared in the countryside.

Liu Shiao-chi and his followers gave medium-sized private plots to the peasants who worked them in their spare time. The peasants began to spend more and more time on their own land — slowing down production in the commune.

Since the Cultural Revolution and the victory of the Maoist line, private plots have been given back to the commune, leaving only small vegetable gardens in private hands.

According to the vice-chairman of the East Wind commune, this was one of the major conflicts involved in the Cultural Revolution. Since peasants make up 80 per cent of China's population, it was the one that directly affected most lives.

PEASANT HAPPY?

That a peasant is happy to give up his land, I find hard to understand. I asked the vice-chairman what the reaction was when their land was again taken away. He ignored my question and stressed that as a result of the land's redistribution, production at the commune has increased, surpassing all past records. He said the peasants are now receiving higher distributions, stating the average five-member family can get as much as $700 worth of rice, sugar and cash per year; their living standard has improved — 40 per cent of the homes now have electricity, a bicycle and a sewing machine — and their working spirit is better than ever.

We were later shown a peasant home which had a bicycle and a sewing machine on display. When I wanted to see some less prosperous-looking homes, I was reminded that they were not included in the tour.

STORE ENCOUNTER

The strict control over our movements became more evident when a middle-aged man spoke English to me at the commune's department store. After a minute of conversation a member of the revolutionary committee took me by the arm and led me away, signalling the man not to follow. No explanations were offered.

Reagan Wages War On Drugs; Lawmakers Fight College Glut

By CAPITOL NEWS SERVICE

Full war against the state's drug traffic was declared by Governor Ronald Reagan. The governor took to statewide television to announce that he is seeking changes in the search and seizure laws "even if it requires a constitutional amendment."

Other points made by Reagan were the necessity of additional research on drugs, the hiring of 21 additional narcotics agents, better training for police, detention without bail for persons committing serious crimes, plus other control measures ranging from no driving priveleges for narcotics users to making it a crime to disclose the name and home address of a policeman.

The majority of the governor's proposals are certain to raise controversy among the legislature's liberals.

SOLUTION to the college enrollment crisis was advocated in a legislative package presented by four Democratic Assemblymen. The package would reaffirm the open enrollment policy at state colleges and provide an unspecified contingency fund to be spent providing education for qualified students turned away because of overcrowding. Sponsors are Assemblymen John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, Leroy Greene, D-Sacramento, John Dunlap, D-Vallejo, and Kenneth Cory, D-Anaheim.

HOMEOWNER TAX RELIEF was the most partisan and talked about subject in the capitol. Reagan announced he is sponsoring reforms certain to give homeowners between a 20 and 40 per cent decrease in property taxes. The Governor was not specific in how he would accomplish this statement until ready to present his proposals as a package to the Legislature.

Forty Democratic legislators banded together to sponsor their party's version of tax relief, an initiative proposal that would exempt owner occupied dwellings from all school taxes and substitute a straight tax of $1 for each $100 of cash value on the home. The lost revenues, according to the Democrats, would be made up through income withholding taxes, higher business taxes, and hikes in the tobacco and liquor levies.

SPEAKER ROBERT MONAGAN

The withholding feature of the Democratic proposal does not place it on the same collision

Comment by Reagan and leadership of the Legislature was restrained but amounted to all being critical of employees. "I do not believe in the right to strike against the public," said Reagan. Assembly Speaker Bob Monagan said strike sanction would "erode away civil service". The employee association course with Reagan's antiwithholding stance as formerly. Assembly Speaker Bob Monagan and Senate Speaker Howard Way have both said they sense a weakening in the Governor's camp on the no-withholding issue of the membership.

THE NO STRIKE clause of the California State Employees Association was cancelled last week by an overwhelming vote of the membership. made it clear that the change in constitution was not a signal for an immediate strike.

CERTAIN DEATH for State Senator John Nejedly's bill to delay construction of the State Water Project's peripheral canal skirting the San Joaquin Delta was forecast here by Assembly Speaker Monagan and Howard Way, speaker pro tem of the Senate.

Colleges are profitable

Monagan noted that southern California legislators, whose constituents will benefit from the canal water, have enough votes to bottle up the bill. Way said the canal is an "integral part of the water project and must be built to maintain the fiscal integrity of the project."

RIOT-TORN CITIES, where violence bubbled over from the campuses, should not be reimbursed by the state for the cost of police work in restoring order, Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post informed the legislature last week. Post noted that the money benefits of having a university or state college in the community more than offset the cost of policing riots.

DISASTER AREA labels were put on 12 northern California counties by Reagan as a result of recent, violent storms. The dozen are Butte, Colusa, Glenn, Lake, Lassen, Modoc, Plumas, Shasta, Siskiyou, Marin, Tehama, and Trinity Counties. The counties are eligible to apply for state aid in repairing damage.

"POLITICAL OVERKILL" was the phrase used by Assemblyman George Milias, R-Gilroy, about the more than two dozen antipollution and environmental control bills introduced at this session of the legislature. Milias, a pioneer in conservation, accused his colleagues of introducing such measures as "campaign gimmicks."

BOOK FOR ALL AGES — Each member of a family in Canton has his or her own copy of the famous "little red book" of sayings by Chairman Mao. A tourist finds most conversation about politics even remotely touching on the political becomes a series of quotations from the book. (Toronto News Service Photo)

Communion Before Full Membership?

BY GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK AP - Cross-country studies indicate that Lutherans generally favor a break with long-standing Protestant tradition by admitting children to the Lord's Supper before they're confirmed into full church membership.

There also was predominant support for delaying the time of confirmation until midteens at the start of high school, when young people can make a more responsible decision about accepting Christian obligations.

Both changes would represent a departure from customs prevailing in most major Protestant churches since their 16th century split from Roman Catholicism.

ANOTHER FACTOR

The considered changes also would erase one of the differences in practice.

Results of the year-long consideration of the matter in local Lutheran congregations across the nation were made public today by a joint commission of the three major American branches of Lutheranism.

The commission's proposals for permitting participation in the Lord's Supper prior to confirmation, and postponing confirmation until a more mature age, produced "much more agreement" than disagreement, the commission reported.

Legislative action on the subject is expected at conventions of two of the Lutheran denominations this year, and of the other in 1971. The grass-roots study outcome gave the proposals a sturdy boost.

The mood for modifying the past practices also was developing in various Christian bodies. Presently, the general rule among Protestant churches—including Espiscopal, Presbyterian, Methodist, Lutheran and United Church Congregational-is to admit youngsters to Communion only after they're confirmed as full members.

ALREADY STARTED

However, numerous congregations, acting on their own, have started allowing unconfirmed children to share the Communion elements.

This is standard practice among Roman Catholics, who admit children to the sacrament as early as 5 years old, although generally at 7, before they're confirmed.

Confirmation generally doesn't come until the ages of about 12 to 14 among both Protestants and Catholics. The best age for this rite also is at issue, with a trend toward raising it to a more mature level.

The rite marks the entry into full Christian responsibilities. In it, a baptized person personally commits himself to the faith, confirms baptismal vows generally taken for him earlier by parents, and assumes adult Christian duties.

Under the Lutheran commission's proposals, confirmation would be delayed until the freshman year of high school, age 15 or 16, when most youths have the capacities for a "sounder decision" about identifying with the church.

UPS AGE

Some Catholic dioceses also have upped the age for the rite or are considering doing so.

At the same time, under the Lutheran proposal, children would be allowed to share Communion at 10 or 11, before confirmation, basing their participation in that rite on their baptism—their initiation into Christianity.

The Lutheran commission says the present Protestant practice linking first Communion with confirmation, obscures the significance of baptism, and suggests a kind of "graduation" from Christian instruction, inevitably causing "dropouts from further educational work" at an immature age.

The commisison represents the American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Church in America, and the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod, with a total of nine million members.

PAY HOMEAGE TO OUR LADY

The Pilgrim Virgin Statue, a touring replica of the Our Lady of Fatima Statue in Portugal, was venerated in special ceremonies Tuesday at St. Raphael's Catholic Church of San Rafael. Special groups visited the statue in the Mission Church during the day and a special mass was offered at the conclusion of the veneration. Among the visitors to the statue were (left to right) Linda Loui, Drew Della Valle and Candy Andrews. The world shrine at Fatama was consecrated in 1942. The Blessed Virgin appeared in visions of three children in Fatama in 1917.

New Communion Rite Wins Strong Support

LONDON (AP) — Seventy-seven per cent of people using the new experimental Series II service of Holy Communion in the Church of England wish to continue with it and 76 per cent are satisfied with its language, according to a survey made by the Church's Liturgical Commission.

Ninety per cent of the clergy polled were enthusiastic. Clergy of all ages seemed more generally to favor the new service, which is shorter and simplified. Although the commission says the response varied considerably an over-all average of 10 per cent of all parishes in England was obtained.

PAUL'S CONVERSION

A Significant Event Celebrated

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

One of the most significant events in this history of Christianity—the conversion of the Apostle Paul — was celebrated in many churches this week.

Paul was the principal missionary of the early church and the man primarily responsible for its rapid spread through the Roman Empire.

He was the first Christian theologian, and his writings (which include 13 of the 27 books of the New Testament) have left such a deep imprint on Christian thought that most scholars rank him second only to Jesus Christ as a creative force in Christianity.

IN CITY OF TARSUS

He was born in the early years of the First Century A.D. in the city of Tarsus, a cosmopolitan trading center on the Mediterranean coast north of Syria. His parents were Diaspora Jews—that is, Jews living "in dispersion" beyond the boundaries of Palestine. They named their son Saul in honor of Israel's first king.

At an early age, Saul was sent to Jerusalem to study Jewish law under the great Rabbi Gamaliel. Like all students of his time, he learned a trade to support himself. His trade was tentmaking. In rabbinical school, he became a fiercely orthodox Jew and a member of the strictest sect of the Pharisees.

Saul believed in dealing ruthlessly with all heresies, and became one of the first persecutors of the infant Christian sect. He was personally involved in the stoning of the first Christian martyr, Stephen.

His conversion is vividly described in the ninth Chapter of the Acts of the Apostles.

"Saul, still breathing threats and murder against the disciples of the Lord, went to the high priest and asked him for letters to the synagogues of Damascus, so that if he found any Christians there he might bring them bound to Jerusalem."

But a strange thing happened to Saul on the way to Damascus. The risen Christ appeared to him and spoke to him. He became a Christian — possibly the most contagiously convinced Christian who ever lived. As a token of his spiritual rebirth, he changed his name to Paul.

NEXT 30 YEARS

For the next 30 years, until he died a martyr's death in Rome, Paul was a mainstay of the early Church. He made three long missionary journeys through Asia Minor and Greece, founding Christian congregations wherever he went. He called himself "the apostle to the gentiles."

Paul was a man of enormous courage. Rather than renounce his faith, he endured at least six floggings, one stoning, numerous imprisonments and finally was beheaded by order of the Emperor Nero.

Tradition depicts Paul as a small, bald-headed, bow-legged man of unprepossessing appearance. He had a complex personality. His letters to the young churches of Asia Minor show that he could be proud and boastful at times, and deeply humble at other times. He had a quick temper and could be quite harsh in replying to critics.

TENDERHEARTED

But he was also tenderhearted, magnanimous and forgiving. He was keenly aware of his own shortcomings, and the knowledge that he could not surmount them by his own moral striving brought him to believe that man is utterly dependent on the help of God to be even passably decent.

This insight, born of personal experience, led to the famous Pauline doctrine that man is "justified" or made worthy of communion with God not by his own merits but because it is God's nature to forgive and accept and love even the most unworthy of His human creatures.

Woman Minister Is Chaplain For CAP

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A woman minister, Rev. Phyllis Ingram, says she has been accepted as a chaplain in the Civil Air Patrol, cracking the long-standing rule allowing "male only" chaplains.

An associate pastor of a United Church of Christ here, and an experienced pilot, she says qualified women clergy now will be given equal consideration for chaplaincies in the C.A.P., a branch of the Air Force. Her denomination had supported the change. Calling the old rule discriminatory.

American Baptists In Big Housing Role

GREEN LAKE, Wis. (AP) — American Baptists are now the largest managers of non-governmental, non-profit housing in the United States, says Dr. William H. Rhoades, head of the American Misison Societies Baptist Home.

He told a meeting here that the denomination currently operates 1,432 low and moderate income housing units, valued at $65 million, serving 80,000 residents. It also administers 1,938 retirement units and 838 nursing care units.

Executive Of Church Will Deliver Sermon

Rev. William O. Vickery, secretary-treasurer of the Assemblies of God, Northern California and Nevada District Council, Inc., will speak at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service of the North Marin Aseembly of God in Novato. Vickery was the first pastor of the North Marin Assembly of God Church. Before being apopinted to his present post, he was minister of the Assembly of God Church of Santa Rosa.

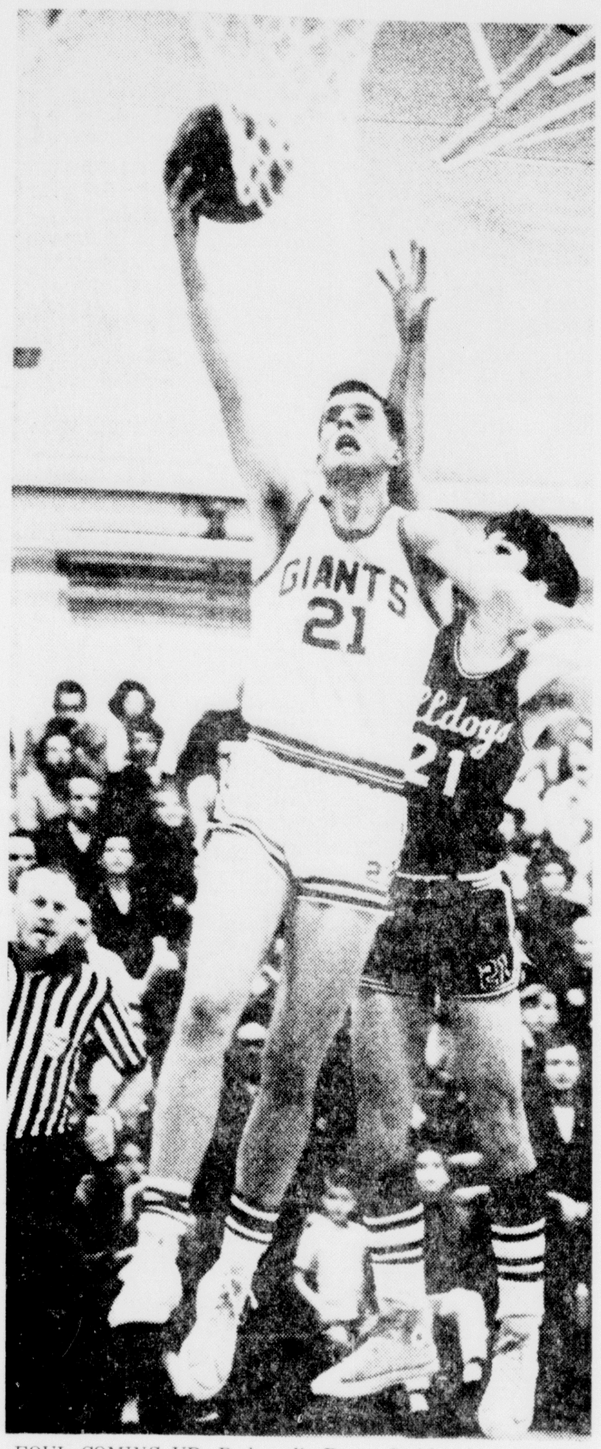
Redwood Guns Down San Rafael In Key Battle



FOUL COMING UP—Redwood's Roger Smith tries to go up past Bruce Nave of San Rafael in a layup attempt but is fouled in the process. Smith wound up with 26 points.

By GARY TISCHLER

That classic Western shoot-'em-up in the Marin County Athletic League basketball race last night wound up like Custer's Last Stand—but it might have turned out different.

Before some 2,800 fans in Larkspur, Redwood High School's streaking, smooth-shooting Giants gunned down ragged, game and eventually outmanned San Rafael, 88-62, in a game that left the Giants on top of the league standings by two games, extended their winning streak to ten and gave them a fine 18-3 season won-lost record, not to speak of a 7-0 loop mark.

Shooting (61 per cent from the field) eventually turned the trick for the Giants as their veteran trio of Jerry Piro, Roger Smith, and John Boro combined for 66 points, 26 for Smith, 22 for Piro and 18 for Boro.

STAR HURT

But it might not have been enough and it certainly would have been close if San Rafael's biggest gun hadn't left the showdown with over a quarter left in the game.

That would be 6-foot, 8-inch Don Duryee, who fell after being hit hard under the bucket and twisted his knee with 17 seconds left in the third quarter. San Rafael coach Mike Diaz, not taking any chances, kept him out for the rest of the game.

It was one of those things you wonder about, like what if Hitler hadn't invaded Russia? As it was, what happened to the Germans happened to the Bulldogs after Duryee's departure.

From a seven-point deficit, the Bulldogs quickly saw the whole thing go down the drain. At the time of his injury, Duryee had just spurted off 10 straight points and left with a night's total of 22 points. And the two fellows guarding him, 6-7 Bill Challender and 6-6 Scott Trobbe, both had four fouls, leaving Redwood with potentially big trouble ahead.

After a hot-shot first period, with Redwood ahead, 21-20, the Giants put Duryee, who had scored 10 points, in a Trobbe-Challender sandwich, not the most delicious thing in the world if you're in the middle. It worked until the fouls started coming in as the Giants had leads of as much as 49-35 and 51-36 before Duryee went on his spree.

For the Giants, Smith and Piro were particularly effective, Smith hitting 10 of 16 shots from the floor, mostly from swishing long range, and Piro driving in to the basket.

In other MCAL games yesterday:

Terra Linda easily bopped San Marin, 75-62, although 6-8 Dana LaFerriere, the whole show for the losers, got away for another big night, this one worth 33 points, and Drake tipped slumping Novato, 46-42, as Jeff Meeker of Drake and Joe DeMaestri of the Hornets shared scoring honors with 17 points each.

In a game Thursday, Tamalpais got itself a share of second place with San Rafael by ripping Marin Catholic, 82-63, behind 60 per cent shooting. Bill Secor topped four Indians in double figures with 27 points.

Finley Many Things, But He Isn't Dumb

Charles O. Finley has been called a lot of things. But nobody has ever called the owner of Oakland A's stupid. Indeed, he is a pretty smart fellow in money matters. The fact that he became a multi-millionaire selling insurance before he ever bought the A's in 1960 speaks for itself.

When Finley moved the A's from Kansas City to Oakland Oct. 19, 1967, there were many who declared he finally had stubbed his financial toe. Why move into an area that could comfortably support one major league club but not two? Why didn't he take his club to Seattle which had just been voted an American League expansion franchise?

Oakland Had More Than Promise

Finley thoroughly surveyed the Seattle setup and shunned it in favor of Oakland which already had a ball park, not just a promise to build one. Seattle's promise to build a major league park still is unfulfilled. For that reason the American League is threatening to lift the Seattle franchise and put it in Milwaukee or Ft. Worth-Dallas.

Furthermore, owners of the Seattle franchise encountered financial problems that were compounded by disappointing attendance last season in Seattle's old Pacific Coast League park where the Pilots expected to play only for one year, two at the most, while the new park was being built.

Finley had attendance problems in Oakland last year, just as the Giants did in Candlestick Park. But Finley's problems in Oakland were nothing compared to those encountered by the Pilots in Seattle.

Stiff Competition Across Bay

Finley knew when he moved the A's to Oakland that the Giants across the bay would give him stiff competition at the gate. And the Giants knew that Candlestick Park attendance would drop, which it did as soon as the A's opened shop in Oakland Coliseum.

"I don't think the Bay Area at the present time will take care of us both as much as they (the A's) think it will," said Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, when the A's moved to Oakland.

But Stoneham acknowledged that at the rate the area was growing, both the Giants and A's might make it comfortably within five years.

That obviously was Finley's long range outlook, too, when he picked Oakland over Seattle. It now would appear that he made a very smart decision, especially in light of the problems encountered by the Pilots upnorth.

It is quite possible that the A's and Giants could wind up in the World Series in the not distant future — and both Candlestick Park and Oakland Coliseum would be jammed. Anything is possible after last year's cinderella championship of the Mets.

Old Veteran Sinks Seals In 2-1 Tilt

By DAVE DIETZ

OAKLAND—Ron Stewart, a 17-year Nation Hockey League veteran, scored on a breakaway midway through the final period last night to give the New York Rangers a 2-1 victory over the Oakland Seals.

For Stewart, 39, it was his fourth game-winning tally this season. It was also his third shorthanded goal of 1969-70, since the Seals had a man advantage when Stewart scored with 9 minutes, 56 seconds left to play.

"We got caught out of position very badly," said coach Fred Glover, explaining how Stewart got free.

After that, the Seals had one big chance to tie it. With about nine minutes left, Gary Jarret eluded two Ranger defenseman but Sawchuck smothered his shot.

TRADE GOALS

The teams traded goals in the second period. Howie Menard scored for Oakland at 9:34, catching goalie Terry Sawchuck out of position after passes from Norm Ferguson and Harry Howell. The Rangers tied it two minutes later on a 60-foot slap shot by Arnie Brown.

New York had the best scoring opportunities throughout the game viewed by 8,612 fans.

Seal Earl Ingarfield lost a small piece of the cornea of his eye in the third period when hit with a stick, but probably will play tomorrow afternoon when the Detroit Red Wings visit. Glover said Ingarfield's vision is not impaired.

Indy Cars At Sears

A 150-mile race for Indianapolis-type special cars has been scheduled at Sears Point International Raceway's road course in southern Sonoma County on April 4, it was announced yesterday in Indianapolis by the United States Auto Club.

It is one of 21 Championship Division races scheduled by USAC, including the Indianapolis 500-mile race on May 30.

Officials said the Sears Point event, which will carry a $50,000 purse, will be one of eight USAC races televised live by TVs network of New York.

It was the fourth major race announced this week for Sears Point's 1970 schedule.

FORMULA A

The others are the Continental championship series for Formula A cars on June 28, the Trans-American series on Sept. 20 and the Canadian-American Challenge Cup event Nov. 8 which also carries a $50,000 purse.

Sears Point President William C. Murray of San Rafael, who travelled east this week to negotiate the major bookings, said the Sonoma motorsports complex's complete schedule will be announced next month. He said Sears Point was one of only three road courses selected for the USAC schedule, the others being at Castle Rock, Colo. and Riverside Indianapolis - type cars primarily race on oval tracks.

SAN DIEGO OPEN

Moody Briton Ties Nicklaus

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tony Jacklin, a fresh-faced, cheerful young Englishman, says he can play good golf only when he's in the right mood.

"I have to really want to play before I can play well," the darkly handsome 25-year-old said Friday after shooting a sparkling 67 and moving into a share of the 36-hole lead in the $150,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open.

"Sometimes I get dejected, and I just can't play. Like at Los Angeles. I got disgusted with myself and just didn't want to play.

"But now I want to. I have that determination and desire."

Jacklin, who became the first Englishman in 18 years to win the British Open when he took the title last year, had a 36-hole total of 133, 11 under par on the 6,792 yard Torrey Pines Golf Club course.

He was tied at that figure with Jack Nicklaus, the first round leader at 68.

DILL THIRD

Terry Dill, with a second round 67, was third at 135, followed by Lee Trevino, 137 after Friday's best round, a 66.

Julius Boros, 71, George Knudsen, 68, Paul Harney and Tommy Jacobs, each 69, were in a group at 138.

Nicklaus, who said he "didn't drive well at all, and I'm not particularly pleased with my swing," had two bogeys, missing the green each time.

Ray Floyd, the PGA champion, had a 74 and missed the cut for the final two rounds with a 149. It took a score of 145 or better to make it.

Billy Casper and Masters champion George Archer were far back at 143.

Novato, San Rafael Win Wrestling Meets

Novato and San Rafael continued to dominate the Marin County Athletic League wrestling scene, as both won easy dual meets yesterday.

Novato, unbeaten in league competition, dumped Tamalpais, 30-17, and San Rafael, beaten only by Novato, whipped San Marin, 39-11.

Petaluma Rallies To Mighty Upset

There is no joy in Santa Rosa today. Petaluma and Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park have come and gone, leaving a couple of stunned basketball teams in their wake.

Petaluma High School, before a screaming mob at Montgomery High School in Santa Rosa, came from seven points down in the last 90 seconds, to tie it, then won it on a clutch free throw in overtime in a 54-53 upset that vaulted the Trojans into a first-place tie with the Vikings in the North Bay League Section I.

FAT UPSET

And Rancho Cotate dished out to Piner of Santa Rosa what Piner had been doing to others, which was a big fat upset by a 62-60 count, in a key North Bay II game.

Petaluma's Steve Hing, who had only five points on the night, scored three of them with only seven seconds left in regulation time on a squirming drive that went in and drew a foul. That sent the game into overtime for the Trojans, who eventually won it on a free throw by Dave Thomas with two seconds left in the extra period.

Two unheralded guards, Dave Adams and Tom Williams, led the Petaluma scoring with 11 and 10 points, respectively. Montgomery and Petaluma are now 5-2 won-lost in league play, a half a game ahead of idle Napa and one game ahead of Santa Rosa and Vallejo.

Steve Wlodarzcyk led Rancho Cotate with 16 points but got help from Mike Stephens with 15 and Greg Woods with 14.

In a non-league game, Sonoma High School dropped only its third game of the season, bowing to John Swett of Crockett, 75-63. Dick Romberg scored 21 points for the losers.

Toomey Wins AAU Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Decathlon king Bill Toomey, an 11th-hour addition to the ballot, was named winner of the prestigious Sullivan Award Saturday as the nation's premier amateur athlete of 1969.

Toomey, who followed up his 1968 Olympic decathlon triumph by setting a world record two months ago in the demanding, all-around track and field test, captured the coveted award by a landslide vote of amateur sportsmen, former Sullivan winners, sports writers and sportscasters across the country.

It had taken a special telephone poll of the 33-man Amateur Athletic Union committee, conducted just before the ballots were mailed out Dec. 30, to include Toomey's name among the list of candidates.

'LIKE REFEREEING A MOP'

Hirsute Boxers Told To Spruce Up

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The State Athletic Commission ordered boxers to spruce up Friday after a fight official complained of one long-haired fighter: "It was like refereeing a mop."

The rule tightens up what Robert L. Turley, commission executive officer, said was a vague regulation that generally ordered boxers to step into the ring with a "clean and tidy appearance."

The commission proposed the amendment last month and it was officially adopted Friday in an announced public hearing in Turley's office where only a newsman showed up.

HAIRY HAZARD

The amended version makes it the sole discretion of the commission representative at the ring to determine whether the length of a boxer's hair, mustache, beard or sideburns presents a hazard to safety or interferes with the contest.

Although ring and commission officials have complained about hairy boxers during the past few years, it may have been featherweight Bobby "Hulak" Diamond and his shoulder length tresses that impressed the commission to action.

Last Aug. 7, Diamond was stopped in the sixth round of a ten-round preliminary fight in Stockton.

A DISTRACTION

And it was then that referee Bob Mitchell likened the 20-year old to a mop. Mitchell told the commission that Diamond could have suffered head cuts, but with that hair, who could tell? Furthermore, Mitchell added, flopping hair could be a distraction to the other boxer. Turlep said Diamond was warned to trim the hair.

Diamond had good and bad luck in San Francisco on Sept. 27. He knocked out his opponent in the first round of a scheduled six-round bout and Turley recommended suspending the kid's license.

"The referee didn't say the hair was a hazard," Turley recalled, "but Diamond wasn't in the ring very long."

Diamond appealed his suspension, but the commission concluded in October that his hair didn't comply with the spirit of the rules.

Two More Giants Sign Contracts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants announced today signing of incumbent third baseman Tito Fuentes and a rookie challenger for the position, Alan Gallagher, Santa Clara University bonus baby.

The signatures bring to 27 the number of Giants already under contract for the upcoming National League baseball season.

Leadoff man Fuentes hit .295 last season, and got up to .320 in the closing weeks when he was playing regularly.

Gallagher, a native San Franciscan, comes off a fine season with the pennant-winning Amarillo team in the Texas League.

End In Sight For Race Strike; Tracks May Be Open By Tuesday

Combined AP & UPI

ARCADIA — Fingers were crossed but it appeared today the long, costly strike against the Santa Anita and Bay Meadows horse race tracks might be nearing an end. There was optimistic speculation that both tracks would open by Tuesday.

The Federation of California Racing Associations, of which Santa Anita and Bay Meadows are members, has offered a compromise wage boost in two parts. Members of the Pari-Mutuel Employees Guild, key union in the row which struck the two tracks Dec. 26, have called meetings to conduct secret balloting tomorrow to accept or reject the latest offer. It is believed the pari-mutuel clerks will accept one or the other offer.

Track And Field

NEW YORK — John Carlos, perhaps the world's finest sprinter who is seeking a million-dollar pro football contract, streaked to his fifth straight victory of 1970 yesterday at the 63rd annual Wanamaker Millrose Games for his first track triumph in New York.

Carlos won the 60-yard dash in 6.1 seconds, and Villnoava's 20-year-old Marty Liquori turned in a 4:02.6 victory in the mile run to highlight the meet.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Earl Harris of Oklahoma State broke the listed American indoor record for the 300-yard dash with a 30.4-second clocking during his qualifying heat at the Oklahoma City indoor track meet.

LONG BEACH — George Frenn, world hammer throw record holder, has topped his own mark with a 71-foot, 3-inch toss of the 35-pound hammer. The 28-year-old school teacher had set the record of 68-7½ on March 4, 1967, in Berkeley.

Basketball

BOSTON — Iron man John Havlicek ended a personal string of 352 games played last night when acute gastritis kept him out of Boston's game against Cincinnati. Emmett Bryant, his replacement, scored 22 points in a 108-103 win over the Royals.

Golf

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Sam Snead fired a second round 71 to match his first round score to take a three-stroke lead over Fred Haas in the PGA Seniors Championship.

Auto Racing

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Jim Killion of White Plains, N.Y., averaging 85.92 miles per hour, won a six-car dogfight in the 76.2-mile Transatlantic Challenge Race for Formula Vee cars at Daytona International Speedway.

Bowling

SAN JOSE — Skee Foremsky of Houston, with a total of 9,467 pins, held the lead after 14 games of the $65,000 San Jose Open Bowling Tournament.

Baseball

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS — Tony Oliva and Rod Carew, the American League's 1969 batting champion at .332, signed contracts with the Minnesota Twins.

BALTIMORE — Nine players, including ace relievers Pete Richert and Eddie Watt, have signed 1970 contracts with the American League champion Baltimore Orioles.

Defense Sparks Warriors

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Al Attles, new coach of the San Francisco Warriors, credited an improved defense for breaking his National Basketball Association club's three-game losing string.

The Warriors' 125-116 victory over the Phoenix Suns here Friday night was their first under Attles who replaced the fired George Lee last Tuesday.

Attles said the pressure put on the Suns by the San Francisco defense kept them from getting set for shots, and that made the difference.

LEE STARS

Clyde Lee scored eight of his 25 points for San Francisco in the first quarter when the Warriors took a 13-point lead. Phoenix never overtook, but closed the margin to five points at the half.

Dick Van Arsdale and Connie Hawkins tied for individual high scoring honors with 28 each for Phoenix. Van Arsdale fouled out with 10 minutes left to play. Hawkins got all but five of his 28 in the second half.

For San Francisco, Ron Williams with 22 and Jeff Mullins with 16 backed up Lee.

The Warriors, who moved within three percentage points of the fourth place in the NBA Western Division — a spot held by the Suns — play Sunday at Boston.

Shark Scares Skin Diver Marin Senior Don't Stop

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Confrontations with sharks haven't stopped Richard L. "Dick" Walsh of Novato from his favorite hobby–skin diving.

At 51, Walsh still gets out almost every Saturday, most of the time with two companions, Jim Craddock and Don Joslin. "I'm the youngest of the three" says Walsh. "We call ourselves the senior citizens of the skin diving world."

Last year when the three men were diving just outside Tomales Bay, Joslin was attacked by a shark and had to undergo three hours of surgery on his right leg.

"I was swimming near him at the time," Walsh recalled, "when he yelled, 'Shark!' I thought he was calling out a warning, but I found out later he had already been hit by the shark. It knocked him all the way out of the water and came back a second time. That's when Joslin hit it with an abalone iron, chasing it away.

"We pulled Joslin out of the water and onto the boat and gave him first aid before getting him to the hospital," Walsh said.

OUT FAST

Just a few months prior to that, in July, the three men had another close encounter with mako sharks at La Paz, in the Sea of Cortez, in Mexico. "There was a school of them, and one of them headed right for us but turned away at the last moment. We really got out of that water fast," Walsh said.

Joslin is back at skin diving, recovered from his encounter, and Walsh says the men were somewhat shark shy after that.

Walsh got interested in skin diving about 10 years ago, he said, after reading a story about the famed underwater diver and photographer Jaques Cousteau in a magazine. About that time Al Giddings Jr. started a skin diving course at College of Marin and Walsh joined it. He's been skin diving ever since.

DICK WALSH

Walsh, a splicing foreman for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. in San Rafael, was born in San Francisco and has been familiar to water and surf almost all his life.

"For me," says Walsh, "skin diving is merely an extension of swimming." He swam competitively at old Commerce High School in San Francisco and did a lot of long distance swimming later.

Now Walsh uses skin diving for abalone and fish hunting and for underwater photography. Since he can't find much in the way of photographic subjects in local waters, Walsh has traveled on occasions to the Monterey area, to Santa Barbara and La Paz, Mexico, with color photography the prime object of the trips.

A member of the Marin Skin Divers Club and a former president, Walsh has won just about every award available to club members, such as trophies for largest abalone, largest fish, diver of year.

"But I'm not interested in trophies," he declared. "I like to do it for enjoyment. It's a great relaxing day."

UNDERWATER SHERIFF

Walsh taught skin diving at the Bamboo Reef Undersea Products in San Rafael shortly after it went into business eight years ago. He has also taught at Drake High School in San Anselmo and Terra Linda High. He was in the Life Saving Service in the Coast Guard and currently is a member of the Marin County Sheriff's Underwater Search and Recovery Unit.

He recommends skin diving for anyone who enjoys water and swimming. But he warns the sport can really become a big part of your life.

"I remember one fellow, a golfer, starting the course," Walsh recalled, "and I don't think he's been back on the golf course for four years. Skin diving has taken over as his No. 1 hobby."

Walsh and his wife, Ethel, have four children, daughters Kathleen, 25, and Margaret, 23, and sons Pat, 17, and Paul, 10. Family home is at 745 Plaza Ama Pola, Novato.

Cal, Stanford Scare Favorites, But Lose

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Early in the season, UCLA's top-rated basketball team was forced into overtime by a Minnesota team that slowed the ball to a crawl. Later Princeton and Oregon State used similar tactics and each time the Bruins won by only a single point.

But California's gritty Golden Bears nearly proved Friday night that you can run with the Bruins and not get blown out of the gym.

UCLA, however, undisturbed at facing a team that actually ran with the ball, outscored Cal 26-7 during one stretch of the second half and came back from a five-point deficit to earn an 87-72 Pacific-8 triumph.

Meanwhile, in the only other Pac-8 game of the night, Southern Cal got a nasty scare from upstart Stanford, but the Trojans came through with 22 seconds to play and won 71-68.

Stanford had taken a 68-67 lead with 32 seconds to play on two free throws by Chuck Moore but George Watson, called by USC Coach Bob Boyd one of the best shooters on the team, tipped in a missed shot that gave USC the lead. Stanford then lost the ball under the Trojan basket and free throws closed out the scoring.

Thus UCLA and USC, the Southern California rivals, continued unbeaten with 3-0 marks in Pac-8 play.

UCLA led only 40-38 in its game with Cal and the Bears put on a spurt to start the second half and led by five points. Things looked even blacker when star forward Sidney Wicks collected his fourth foul with only four minutes gone in the half and went to the bench for a rest.

But, with John Ecker in for Wicks, the fast break broke the Bears' back. At one stretch, the Bruins reeled off 11 straight points and Cal came down court five straight times without taking a shot.

College Of Marin Quint In Desperate Situation

College of Marin's basketball team faces something of a must situation tonight when the Tars entertain DeAnza Junior College of Cupertino at Kentifeld, 8 o'clock.

A loss tonight won't kill the Tars' chances in the Camino Norte Conference race but it would be a little like having terminal cancer.

The Tars are 3-3 won-lost in the race, two games off the pace being set by Contra Costa of Richmond and none other than DeAnza itself, so the visitors won't be too eager to give away a game themselves. The Tars are in solid possession of fifth place. West Valley of Campbell and Santa Rosa are in third with 4-2 marks.

Pat Schaffer still leads the defense-minded Tars with a 17-point scoring average. No other Tars are averaging in double figures.

MARIN BOWLING HIGHLIGHTS

Novatan Rolls 299 Game

A wobbling 10-pin on his 12th ball is all that stopped James B. (Jim) Patterson from a perfect performance.

Patterson, a department manager at Long's Drugs in Novato, rolled a 299 game, the year's high mark, Tuesday night in the Nite Owls League at Nave Lanes near Ignacio.

"That damn 10-pin just wouldn't go down," the 29-year-old Patterson lamented after that fantastic game. What makes his feat that much harder is the fact he carries only a 168 average.

His near perfecto came on the last game of the night, following games of 161 and 178, giving him a 638 series.

"From the seventh frame on I was so excited I couldn't even talk," said Patterson. "In the 10th frame I was shaking like a leaf. But when I threw that first ball in the 10th and it was a strike I calmed down a little. I wasn't as nervous when I threw the 11th and 12th balls."

From the ninth frame on other bowlers had stopped rolling and were crowded around in back of Patterson.

"I noticed it was very quiet," he said. "It made me nervous."

His previous high game in league was 270, rolled when he lived in Los Angeles. He now lives in Novato, married, and the father of 5-year-old Marie. His wife, Genevieve "Pinky," was with him when he rolled the 299. He's been bowling for 11 years.

STRIKES TO SPARE--Jim Lassle's 729 series in the 910 Classic League at Country Club Bowl was topped by a 286 game that had 10 straight strikes in it; his other games were 234 and 209...In the same league, Ron Reagan rolled nine strikes in a row and had a 279 game, 693 series...Judy Miller, 143 average bowler in the Tuesday Coffee Cuppers at Greenbrae Lanes, had never rolled a 200 game or 600 series, so she goes out and rolls a 213, a 203 and finishes the morning with a 188 and 604 series...Lynn Baker, 124 avg., went all the way up to 223 game and had a 567 series in the Twilite Twirlers at Country Club, first time over both the two and five marks.

THIS AND THAT--In the Redwood Boys League at Greenbrae Lanes, Wayne Ziegler went over 600 for the third week in a row, this time a 629...Clara Perkins rolled a 236 game in the Bowlerettes at Country Club, 90 pins over her average and first time over 200...Jo Ann Wagner rolled her first 200, and it was right on the nose, in the Gutter Belles League at Greenbrae Lanes...Patty Wann, 122 average rolled her first 200-plus game, 207, and Bonnie Pohlmann 126 avg., rolled a 215, both in the Winter Wonders at Country Club ...In the Agents 1108 at Country Club, Jorna Hellman picked up the very difficult 4-6-7 split...Perry Litchfield led the Saturday Juniors at Country Club, 212-190-200--602...High over their average at Country Club went Bea Allen, (133 avg.), 532, Donna Bunch (142 avg.), 530, and Willette Clark (136 avg.), 520.

'MUSH' IN FAIRFAX, BELEVEDERE?

Marin Sled Dogs Off To The Races

The call of the Yukon--"Mush!"---echoes through Belvedere, Fairfax and other parts of Marin these days, even though the Bay Area is a far piece from the Arctic Circle.

Sled dog drivers from all over the U.S. and Canada are getting used to eating slush kicked up by the winning team driven by Bob Levorsen of 332 San Rafael Avenue, Belvedere.

And Laurie Leach of 152A Porteous, Fairfax, has won races in the Sierra with her three-dog team.

Levorsen is in the St. Paul-Minneapolis area this weekend to defend the sled dog racing championship he won last year in the annual winter carnival there. His title was in the six-dog competition last year; this year he's competing in the grueling open class competition which sets no limit on the number of dogs a sourdough sledsman sends yapping over an 18 mile course three days in succession. The final race will be tomorrow.

Earlier this week, Levorsen packed his cold-weather clothes, a light but bulky racing sled and eight of his Huskies onto an airliner in San Francisco to go to the races.

For warmups, he and his team already this year have won the season's first Western circuit race, Jan. 3 and 4 at The Sisters, Ore., and placed second to an Alaskan team at Port Arthur, Canada last weekend.

Levorsen, a geologist for Standard Oil of California in San Francisco, moved to Marin with his family and his dogs a year and a half ago, from Anchorage, Alaska.

He is on the board of directors of the International Sled Dog and Racing Association.

Miss Leach and her huskies will be heading this weekend not for the Twin Cities races, but rather to the Sierra Nevada Dog Drivers Association races at Bear Valley. The Fairfax woman and her three-dog team have won four preliminary races so far.

Some of Marin's sled dogs recently departed for colder clime--when Dr. and Mrs. Robert Barringer of 70 Keats Drive, Mill Valley, moved their family, Siberian Husky team and standard poodle dogs to the Puget Sound area in Washington. Their former neighbors in the Enchanted Hills had gotten used to seeing the happy huskies zooming up and down the steep streets, practicing with a real, Indian-built sled mounted on wheels.

FLYING TO THE SNOW — Lead dog Tweeter (whose blue eyes are flashing) and teammate Ring wait their turn to be loaded onto a jetliner bound for Minneapolis-St. Paul and the annual Winter Carnival sled races there. Sitting on their sled to hold the dogs is airline employee Shirlyann Gildea; sled dog driver Bob Levorsen of Belvedere holds another of the eight dogs he took north this weekend.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Jan. 31, the 31st day of 1970 with 334 to follow.

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1943 the Soviet Union announced the virtual annihilation of 330,000 Nazi troops at Stalingrad. It was a turning point of World War II in Russia.

In 1953 more than 2,000 persons were killed when North Sea storms flooded Holland.

In 1958 the United States launched its first satellite into orbit. It was Explorer I.

In 1968 North Vietnamese guerrillas raided the United States Embassy in Saigon. It was the opening of the Viet Cong's New Year's offensive.

A thought for the day: Blaise Pascal said, "Between us and hell or heaven there is nothing but life, which of all things is the frailest."

Sugarloaf Ridge State Park Closed

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Sugarloaf Ridge State Park in Sonoma and Napa counties has been closed to the public due to rock and mud slides on the main park access road the state Department of Parks and Recreation has announced.

Cleanup operations are in progress. However, due to unstable soil conditions caused by recent heavy rains, the road will remain closed for an indefinite period.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Ducking Trick At First Is Not Always The Wisest Move

Today's hand ends a week devoted to the play known as the "duck." This consists of letting the opponents win the first or second trick in a suit in order to take your own tricks when you can run the rest of the suit. Effective though it is, the duck is not always the best way to develop a long suit.

WINS WITH ACE

West leads the jack of spades, East puts up the king, and you win with the ace. If you prefer, you may refuse the first spade trick and take the second. In this case there is no great difference.

You have two sure tricks in each suit and need one additional trick to make the contract. Naturally you see that your best chance is in clubs, and your first impulse is to let the opponents win the first club.

You must resist this impulse. In the first place, there is no need to save entries to the dummy. If you develop the clubs successfully, you can return to dummy with the ace of diamonds to cash the rest of the clubs. Equally important, if you duck the first club, you are then committed to that suit and that suit only. The opponents will knock out the queen of spades and will then be ready to defeat the contract with the rest of the spades if you fail to take nine tricks on the run.

TEST CLUBS

It is a better idea to test the clubs by leading out the ace and king. If both opponents follow suit both times, you can give up a club and get back to dummy with the ace of diamonds to take the rest of the clubs.

As the cards lie, you discover on the second round of clubs that the suit will not break well. Now you must fall back on the diamonds. Give up the first diamond, win the spade return, then cash the king and ace of diamonds. When that suit breaks well, dummy's last diamond furnishes your game-going trick.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1-no trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
S—K 7 4
H—Q J 9 8 7 3
D—J 9 6
C—J.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four hearts.

The combined count is high enough for a game, and you surely have a good enough trump suit in the partnership hands. You cannot be sure of making your game, but you will surely have a reasonable play for it.

'Our Children Are Right' On Relevance, Teachers Told

BY BRYCE W. ANDERSON

"Our children are right that their education is irrelevant," a Los Angeles educator-newspaperman told Marin County teachers yesterday. "They must also realize that everything is irrelevant and it's not anybody's fault."

The speaker was Dan Moore, manager of educational programs for the Los Angeles Times, who was featured at a luncheon session of the Marin County teachers' annual winter institute at College of Marin. Some school board members also attended.

Moore's thesis was that not only is this a time of rapid change, it is a time of incredible developments. They are so rapid, and so incredible, that everything becomes irrelevant.

The generations, he maintained, must come together "to do the best we can to solve the problem . . . because if we don't, we will probably be the last two generations that have ever lived."

Today's students, he said, "are scared stiff from the standpoint of human survival" — and well they may be when the United States alone "has enough nerve gas right now to wipe out 100 billion people"; when "billions will starve" by the year 2000 if population growth is not curbed; when we "face the end of life within one decade unless we do something about pollution."

Despite these dire possibilities, Moore appeared far from downhearted as he addressed the throng in the college's Student Center cafeteria -- interrupted at one point by a fight between two of the College of Marin's ubiquitous dogs that had wandered into the dining room.

He warned, however, that unless the problems are attacked they "may bring the downfall of democracy."

This could come not only from revolt of starving people, from ruination of the environment, or from atomic war, he suggested. It might come also from maldistribution of wealth coupled with technological unemployment.

"If 5 per cent of the population decides to tell you to roll your society through a hole in a doughnut, you've had it," he told his mostly-over-30 audience. The jails won't hold that many people.

Teachers, he said, face the task of convincing their students that what is irrelevant can be corrected, of educating them to adjust to a constantly changing world. That, he said, makes the current generation of teachers the most important in history.

The pollution threat to which Moore referred briefly was treated at greater length during a morning session by author Paul F. Brandwein, who spoke on "13 Propositions in Conservation."

Most of the day was taken up with section meetings for teachers on more commonplace subjects such as mathematics, science, vocational education, etc. There were also sessions on drug abuse, and on humane education.

Black Panther Captain Gets Fine Of $60, Mild Lecture

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court placed Black Panther Capt. George A. Gaines on one year probation yesterday, fined him $60 and gave him a mild lecture for disturbing the peace at a Panther breakfast last May.

A jury last month convicted Gaines of disturbing the peace of Delta Christ of Sausalito by calling her a "racist bitch" but found him innocent of battery against her at the breakfast at Martin Luther King School in Sausalito.

Judge Smith yesterday denied a motion by Gaines' attorney, Robert Zweig, for a new trial and told Gaines, "You're not in Mississippi," and said that Gaines had received a fair trial.

"Every woman is entitled to be treated with respect regardless of whether she is black, white or whatever color," the judge told Gaines.

In rejecting a suggestion by Deputy Dist. Atty. J. Michael Anthony that Gaines be given a short jail term, the judge noted that 28 Sausalito School District teachers had written favorable letters about Gaines.

Zweig said he would appeal the jury decision to the Marin Superior Court appellate division.

Financial Report To Be Discussed

The San Rafael Board of Education's financial support of the city's park and recreation program will be discussed by representatives of the city council, board of education and park and recreation commission at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at city hall.

City Mgr. James H. McCown said the meeting would consider whether the board of education's $25,000 annual contribution to the recreation program will be continued at the same amount, at a different amount, or discontinued.

Mayor C. Paul Bettini and Councilman Frederick C. Robbins will represent the city. Chairman Charles L. Tacchi and director Andrew J. Snyder will represent the parks and recreation commission, and Carl J. Brown and John C. Pfeiffer will represent the board of education.

Audio Engineer

MINI SKIRTS AND SOUND — Yes, mini skirts do effect sound. One of the important design aspects of a symphony hall or auditorium acoustics. The job of the acoustical engineer is to work with the design of the boundary surfaces; that is, the ceiling, walls, floor, and the seats. He also has to take into account the people that will be seated in the room. The surfaces will either reflect (bounce) all of the sound that hits it, or absorb some of the sound and reflect the rest, or absorb all of the sound. The acoustical engineer designs in the correct shapes for surfaces and the desired amount of absorbtive material, and the location of the various absorbing materials. He takes into account the absorbing qualities of the various materials at the audible frequencies. Applying acoustic tile here and there without taking into account the absorbing qualities at low, mid, and high frequencies could be disastrous.

These above factors are used to insure that the finished music hall will have the desired reverberation time for the type of music to be performed in the hall. For the symphony hall a certain amount of absorbtion is assumed for the people who will be seated for a performance. This absorbtion coefficient is based on what was classed as conventional dress; that is, tuxedos for the men and long evening gowns for the women. Recently, some studies have been made in music halls occupied by men and women in the modern dress of today. The mini skirts expose legs where once there were folds of absorbing material. It has been determined that this reduction in absorbtion does effect the reverberant characteristics of the room and thus the quality of the sound.

One of the reasons why even the most expensive and laboratory precise sound systems for the home do not duplicate the sound of the symphony hall is the acoustics of the home. The average room in the home that accommodates the stereo music system is very small in comparison to the size of the symphony hall. Because of its size, the symphony hall has a certain amount of reverberance, and many reflections. The room in the home has practically no reverberance and only very short reflections. The sound is different. The warmth is less. To offset this, some recording studios are adding this reverberance in the recorded material by various techniques.

Some new recordings from Philips and Mercury:

SPANKY & OUR GANG — "WITHOUT RHYME OR REASON" — Mercury SR 61183:

This joyful vocal sextet is one of the best in the Mamas & Papas bag. Spanky is the gal of the group.

With the offbeat and original ideas of one of their producers, jazz pianist-vocalist-composer Bob Dorough, they have a winning LP here.

Some of the gems: Hoagy Carmichael's swinging dope song "Hong Kong Blues," the socially-concerned "Give a Damn," Dorough's own "Pedagogical Round No. 2," and "Leopard Skin Phones," which is about stereo headphones and should be listened to that way for some good guffaws.

"THE CHARLATANS"—Philips PHS 600-309:

This San Francisco group has been a long time in getting themselves onto 12-inch plastic, but now they've got themselves a goody.

The group often has a strong jazz feel, and the prominent woodwinds are a nice touch. Van Dyke Parks' "High Coin" provides a fine opener, Johnny Cash's "Folsom Prison Blues" is a worthwhile view of that tune from a different side, and the Charlatans' versions of such oldies as "Wabash Cannonball" and "Alabama Bound" really truck it on down the line.

"NEW! IMPROVED! BLUE CHEER"—Philips PHS 600-305:

Blue Cheer has gained a reputation as the loudest rock group in the world in live appearances. Most of the stage is filled with amplifiers and speakers and the group—only a trio, last I heard—is almost lost.

Recordings only can accommodate a limited dynamic range, however, so the impression of Blue Cheer one gets from their LPs is rather different. Also, a number of other musicians have been added for this session.

There is a good deal of variety in the nine tracks, freeing the album from the heavy continuous blues beat of their last one. There is even a Dylan tune.

The group's vocal performances do not equal their instrumental ones.

"FESTIVAL IN BRAZIL" — Second International Pop Song Festival; Third Festival of Brazilian Pop Music — Philips PHS-600-273:

Here are a dozen examples of the top hits from two Brazilian festivals of pop music.

The only title that seemed familiar to me was the beautiful "O Cantado," by the leading song-writer, Caymmii. It is sung by Elis Regina. The other tunes run the gamut from bossa nova, through sentimental ballads, even including one which recreates a voodoo rite.

The Musical Barber Of Marin

See Page M2

A Flute Solo With Your Haircut

By GIL PEARSON

While the Barber of Seville thrills opera devotees with full orchestral accompaniment, a barber of Marin charms and entertains customers with his flute alone.

"The man is an excitingly accomplished musician," reports Wilbur Russell, music department head at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo. "I popped in for a trim a while back and was astonished to catch him piping one of Telemann's fantasias with magnifcent control."

But hold! (to borrow a phrase from the classics): This avant hair stylist goes even farther in shuffling the stereotype barbershop scene. He has replaced the stock-in-trade checkerboard with a grand piano and invites customer instrumentalists to join him in impromptu chamber ensemble renditions from the works of such as Bach, Mozart, Hindemith and Chopin.

THUS IT IS that Clive Hawthorne, lifelong music student, today at 38 operates in his Fairfax shop as the barber of Marin who would challenge—with his flute—the world-wide traditional entrenchment of barbershop quartets.

"The responsibilities of family life dictated that I drop the uncertain money rewards of intermittent combo contracts and learn a trade. So I went to barber school and now own my own shop," Clive explains.

He is, in fact, yet a member of the Erotic Bach Trio, a combo which is netting recognition with its chamber music as offered at such places as Tomales Bay's Marshall Hotel and Sausalito's Trident.

This serious-music inclined group is rounded out with Dean Reilly, bass violin player, who formerly played with the Kingston Trio and with Carmen McRae; and, Richie Crabtree, Mill Valley pianist who has played with the Mastersunds and with Woody Herman.

Fred Katzmann, prominent San Francisco piano teacher, has pronounced the Erotic Bach Trio to be one of the finest chamber music ensembles in the Bay Area.

NOSEY REPORTERS poking around Clive's shop at the Fair-Anselm Shopping Center in Fairfax soon find that here at hand is a barber who does not frit away his free time idly.

For proof, you need but check out the customers' library. The usual girlie and sports magazines are banished and substituted are such mind expanders as "Man's Presumptuous Brain" by A.T.W. Simeons, M.D.; "The Science of Life" by H. G. Wells, and "The Notebooks of Leonardo Da Vinci."

But what is going to grab you good is "A Night in Hellas" by none other than our barber of Marin, Clive Hawthorne!

This 1961 self-published paperback proffers Clive's own ancient Greek translations of amatory epigrams—a veritable gush of romantic comic poems.

"Readers are going to want to know why you undertook such a fantastically difficult chore, translating from an unspoken language," we ventured.

His reply, "Because the challenge was there."

NEW HAIRCUT customers rarely open conversations with Clive seeking a barber's appraisal of the weather as is traditional at most other shops around the globe.

Rather, he is immediately queried about his display of unusual flutes adorning the walls.

These include a Philippine multi-reed instrument which, while interesting in appearance, is one with which it is difficult to enlist listener enthusiasm. "A toy, really," he says.

And there is a nose flute which, yes, is played through the nose. And there is, as well, a double flute requiring extraordinary dexterity in using both hands.

A captive audience appreciative of Clive's impromptu customer-involved chamber concerts, which generate on a moment's notice, are the women next door at the Fair Lady beauty salon.

The hair clipper frequently rounds out nights at his shop teaching students piano, and the bass and percussion instruments.

AS A FOOTLOOSE youth, Clive Hawthorne had been a jazz musician. From age 8 he was tutored in trumpet, and, he taught himself piano. Later he studied music briefly at San Francisco State and then much more seriously under members of the San Francisco Symphony — drums under Walter Larue and trumpet under Edward Haug.

Thereafter, he sailed as a ship's musician to the Orient for the American President Lines. "I got my union membership card at age 14."

In 1957 Clive became involved with the Renaissance movement which included Allen Ginsberg, Kenneth Rexroth and Michael McClure. The future barber of Marin was the only musician in this group of poets and writers.

"I learned how to write poetry and I composed music for lyrics by those teachers," he recalls. "All along the way I played jazz with such bands as Gerald Wilson and the Montgomery Brothers."

BUT IT WAS love for beautiful Judith Tye that completely changed Clive's way of life. In 1962 he married this daughter of Dr. Norwood Tye, executive head of the American Leper Mission who has served in the Philippines for 23 years.

He quit the jazz music profession and, on finishing barbering school, began cutting hair in Greenbrae.

"At this time," says Clive, "I developed an urge to produce melodic music as against per-

AT THE barber shop of Clive Hawthorne in the Fair-Anselm Shopping Center in Fairfax, customers are more often favored by music than by talk about sports or politics. And the music is not likely to be the traditional barbershop harmonies, but instead some of the classics that Hawthorne, an accomplished musician, prefers to play upon his flute. There is a collection of flutes hanging on the wall, and Hawthorne knows how to play them all. (Photo by Gil Pearson)

cussion, so I chose the flute because I did not want to play a reed instrument and I did want to get into the classical sphere. I studied under Gary Gray, the second flutist in the San Francisco Symphony orchestra."

As for the future, our Paris, Ark., born subject hopes to see his shop prosper and to enjoy continual bookings for his Erotic Bach Trio.

Clive Hawthorne recently bought his 2-year-old son Njal a trumpet which the boy toots on and sleeps with. His oldest daughter, Mary, plays flute.

The youngest child, Karin Leah, has not yet indicated an instrument preference, being but 5 months old. But great hopes beat in the heart of the musical barber of Marin.

SOMETIMES barber Clive Hawthorne and his customers wind up in a little "jam session" of chamber music after the hair-cutting is over. Here the flute-playing hair stylist is joined by violinist Steve Golden and Wilbur Russell who is at the shop's grand piano for a rendition from light opera.

While barbering is now his trade Clive Hawthorne also remains a professional musician, playing regularly with the Erotic Bach Trio. Here on the pier of the Marshall Hotel on Tomales Bay, where they perform regularly in Sunday afternoon chamber music concerts, are trio members, left to right, Dean Rielly, Hawthorne and Richie Crabtree.

Scientists, Teachers Strive To Improve The Quality Of Life

College Of Marin Health Educator Finds Inspiration At Conference

Family planning, part of the health education courses he teaches at College of Marin, must be concerned, not just with the quanti y of life, but the quality as well, believes Victor Petreshene.

The teacher is all the more convinced of this as he presents material to young adults on family planning and pre-natal care these days, after having attended a March of Dimes National Volunteer Leadership Conference in San Diego.

"The importance of pre-natal care was really underscored," he says.

MEDICAL SCIENTISTS of the caliber of Jonas Salk, Jacob Bronowski, Roger Guillemin and Renato Dulbecco participated in the conference, outlining research in the fields of birth defect causes, prevention and treatment.

"Two milestones have been reached in 10 years of work in birth defects," Petrashene says. "We have expanded our genetics knowledge to provide for genetics counseling for prospective parents at such facilities as the Marin March of Dimes supported Genetics Evaluation and Counseling Clinic at Ross General Hospital.

"And we have improved our pre-natal diagnosis techniques to the point where the defect can be determined if counseling indicates a couple is likely to give birth to a defected child.

"CARRIERS OF more than 50 genetics disorders can be identified and techniques such as intrauterine transfusions, surgery and feeding are now being developed to correct many such disorders before birth."

A visit to the Salk Institute was one of the highlights of his trip to Southern California for Petreshene.

This opportunity to meet personally the famous Dr. Jonas Salk made a lasting impression upon the Marin health educator.

He describes Salk as "a dynamic, yet modest, individual, genuinely interested in human beings and their welfare. It was evident that he would much rather have been working in his laboratories on behalf of humanity, but he felt it important that, despite his dislike for fanfare, he lend his presence and assistance to such groups as the March of Dimes that have supported him in his work."

PETRESHENE SAYS he was much impressed by the dedication of all the scientists.

And he remembers Dr. Charles E. Flowers of the obstetrics-gynecology department of the University of Alabama Medical Center, in lecturing on "Quality Control of Fetal Life," saying: "Knowing about and understanding about the birth process and pre-natal care should not be taken for granted. The most critical time for the embryo is tht first seven weeks."

This, believes Petreshene, is the best possible endorsement of the very kind of education that he carries on in his classroom.

AND HE RECALLS Dr. Louis Z. Cooper, associate professor of pediatrics at New York University's Bellevue Medical Center, discussing German measles, showing slides demonstrating the havoc this unpredictable virus can cause in the newborn, and stressing the importance of the "very safe, 99 per cent effective" vaccine, particularly for small children who frequently carry the disease home to their pregnant mothers.

"This, too, brought home to me the importance of research, and the just-as-important education necessary to cause the public to take the fullest advantage of the fruits of that research," Petreshene says.

To Petreshene it is inconceivable that a really informed public would continue to be apathetic toward German measles shots.

Or toward the agencies such as March of Dimes that have raised the funds for much of our most productive medical research and that have helped to carry-on the vital followup educational programs by just such actions as sending Petreshene to the San Diego conference.

"What's So Difficult About A Mustard Stain?"

Mustard is one of the most difficult stains to remove. What appears to you to be a small yellow stain is, to your drycleaner, a combination of salt, spices, oil, vinegar, tannin, tumeric and possibly oxidized oil. The National Institute of Drycleaning's stain scientists say this means 14 different spot removal steps have to be taken before that little yellow spot disappears.

We haven't space to describe those 14 steps or the skills their use requires, but let me assure you that the little squirt of mustard that lands on a garment is loaded with trouble. Keep covered up when eating mustard-immersed food or be especially careful not to splash the mustard.

The People Who Made San Rafael

Farsighted Pioneers Paved Way For Later Progress

(Editor's Note: This is the third installment of the history of San Rafael written by Independent-Journal historian Florence Donnelly prior to her death last year.)

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

In the final analysis, it has been the people who have made San Rafael.

And these pacemakers, particularly the pioneers who led the way toward progress in the earlier years, have left their names on many public places.

San Rafael's city parks constitute a prime example.

LOUIS SLOSS and Lewis Gerstle, both born in Bavaria and married to sisters, first came to San Rafael like many other San Franciscans for the summers.

Then, in the early 1880s, they purchased property that had been owned by Anson P. Hotaling on the south side of San Rafael and became full-time residents of the Marin county seat.

The two men had previously made their fortunes with their Alaska Commercial Co. which had secured a lease from the government to conduct sealing operations off the Pribilof Islands, and then had boomed into a great trading enterprise with the discovery of gold in Alaska.

THE SAN RAFAEL property ultimately was presented by the Gerstle heirs to the city as a park. And the Sloss home served as the lodge building in Gerstle Park until it was destroyed on May 21, 1955, by a fire that claimed eight lives and caused injury to seven other persons.

Another prominent Marin couple, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Boyd, parents of the noted explorer, Louise A. Boyd, presented land for Boyd Park to the city as a memorial to their two sons, Seth Cook Boyd and John Franklin Boyd Jr., both of whom had died while still youths.

A lasting imprint upon the face and history of San Rafael was made by the late Jacob Albert, described in an editorial in the San Rafael Independent as "the merchant prince of Marin...founder of the North Bay's largest mercantile institution and the city of San Rafael's greatest benefactor."

IN 1892 MR. and Mrs. Jacob Albert had come to San Rafael and had opened a small store. This grew into a large department store that ultimately was only the first of a chain of such establishments. There were other stores in San Anselmo, Mill Valley, Napa and Richmond.

In 1943 as one of many philanthropies Albert gave a parcel of land at Second and A streets in San Rafael to the Marin Council of the Boy Scouts of America, and later added a $20,000 gift so that a building could be constructed on the site.

He donated, too, the land now known as Albert Park to the city for an athletic field.

JACOB OR JAKE Albert served San Rafael as a city councilman, as did his son Harry.

It was Jacob Albert, too, who built the Albert Building for professional offices on B at Fourth Street, as well as a number of the other more imposing structures of the city.

Ultimately his Albert's Department Store in San Rafael was sold to the huge Macy's chain.

Generally, however, the business section of San Rafael in the early 20th Century was a hodgepodge of smaller shops.

EASILY THE MOST numerous and among the best patronized of turn-of-the-century downtown San Rafael's business establishments were the saloons. For instance, three of the corners of Fourth and B streets were occupied by saloons, and the fourth by a store that sold liquor. But just down Fourth Street was Hover's Candy Store, a favorite of younger residents. And the old B Street School, not always so popular with the children, was also nearby.

THE INDEPENDENT in 1903 carried such advertisements as these:

"Board and Room, $5 a week, Baldwin Restaurant, Mrs. Sylva, proprietor."

"San Rafael Livery, boarding and sale stable, N.McPhail, proprietor."

"Gardner's, B Street, near post office."

"R. W. Johnson, hardware, stoves, ranges, 408 B Street, opposite post office."

MOST NUMEROUS of the business establishments, however, were the saloons, scattered throughout the trading section of town. And since women were not supposed to frequent them, "family entrances" leading to the back doors of the saloons were built for their use.

Visitors from San Francisco and the East Bay frequently came to San Rafael and other Marin points to enjoy dancing, beverages and food at these privately-owned picnic grounds. Two of the largest, Laurel Grove on the southeast side of San Rafael, and another in the West End south of Fourth Street, were located in the county seat.

THE CONSTRUCTION of the electric railroad line and the beginning of service to San Rafael in the winter of 1901-1902 made it not only easier for nonresidents to visit the county in search of recreation, but also shortened and eased the daily trip of residents who commuted to San Francisco for work. The hour-long electric train-ferryboat ride marked a pleasant beginning and ending for an office day.

In 1906 the Bay Area's worst earthquake was followed by fire that swept through San Francisco.

In San Rafael, the quake did little damage. Its most substantial structure, the courthouse, suffered no buckled walls nor even cracks.

BUT THE QUAKE did have its impact on San Rafael, for it brought scores of San Franciscans, fleeing the devastation there, across the bay to Marin refuges.

Some came only for a temporary stay. But a good many remained to buy or build homes in San Rafael. Regular residents rallied to the aid of these homeless, taking many of the refugees into their own houses until they could find permanent accommodation. Still others were housed for a time in tents.

The catastrophe also gained for San Rafael an industry.

THE TOWN HAD always viewed with extreme reluctance heavy manufacturing that might have marred the serenity of the community, but had taken a much more favorable attitude toward light industry. Such as the Carson Glove Co.

The Independent, in May, 1906, a month after the earthquake, reported:

"The Carson Glove Co. of San Francisco has leased a temporary place (in San Rafael) for conducting business."

THE MOVE PROVED anything but temporary for the firm which had been founded in 1887 in San Francisco by the late Robert N. Carson and had flourished there until its plant was destroyed by the fire that followed the earthquake. The family business then shifted its operations to San Rafael, and it is known today as the Carson Manufacturing Co.

Most of the buisinesses of yesteryear have long since van-

PARADES WERE A colorful part of early-day San Rafael's community life. And inevitably there was a brass band in the forefront. Here the date was Sept. 9, 1908. And the occasion was labeled as "The Grand Carnival Parade."

ished. An exception is McPhail's, also a family enterprise that is more than 85 years old.

It began as a livery stable owned by Neil McPhail in a two-story building at Fourth and B streets. Two sons, John and Graham, joined their father in the firm and have carried on, as the business has expanded greatly.

A PIONEER INDUSTRY in San Rafael was Shaver's lumber mill, founded by Isaac Shaver in 1864 at the south end of Shaver Street.

Shaver also had lumber mills in Nicasio and Lagunitas. In 1872 he added a planing mill to his San Rafael plant. After his death, the mill was bought by Henry Parker Wood and James Christensen who operated the Pioneer Mill and Lumber Co.

The San Rafael Independent reported in December of 1904:

"ANDREW CARNEGIE has set aside $25,000 for a public free library in San Rafael, according to Vincent Neale, attorney. San Rafael should buy a suitable lot. The city must guarantee $2,500 a year for maintenance of library and grounds. The majority of people favor building the library on Fourth Street on one of three corners at E Street."

It was to be a number of years before the money was raised. In the interim, the library was moved from the rented building on Fourth Street to the north wing of the San Rafael High School building on E Street that was completed in 1899 and became the town's newest pride and joy.

Library trustees raised $6,500 through public subscription for the proposed Carnegie project, with some of them giving as much as $500 each. Work on the building was started April 23, 1908, and was completed in December of that year.

THAT BUILDING still serves the city, although it has been extensively enlarged, remodeled and improved.

For the literary-minded, the new library was a great boon. Others found their entertainment in the silent movie theaters.

On Oct. 8, 1908, the Marin Journal reported: "Milan has the contract to remodel the opera house, now the Lyric Theater."

That same year, the Journal carried this advertisement: "The Palm Theater: See a show in comfort and safety on the ground floor. The Palm is the only fireproof theater in Marin County."

THE RIVAL theaters were almost directly across the street from each other on Fourth between C and D, the Palm on the north side, the Lyric on the south.

Old-timers like to tell of how one member of an audience, enraged by the histrionics of the villain of a movie, arose from his balcony seat, drew out a revolver, and fired several shots at the badman. The results were a ruined play and a riddled screen.

Later there was another Lyric Theater in San Rafael, this one on the north side of Fourth Street between A and B. It was owned and managed by George Sargent.

The Candidates' Ball was always a big social and political event in San Rafael.

A PROGRAM FOR one of the balls given Aug. 13, 1910, in the Armory Hall, headquarters of Company D, National Guard, on the ground floor of the old Masonic Building, lists the names of the officials, and of the candidates who were to be voted upon three days later.

In 1890 WHEN the photograph at top was taken, San Rafael was still very much a rural place. The picture was shot from the roof of the Thomas Wintringham home at 114 Laurel Place, looking down Petaluma Avenue, now Lincoln Avenue. The large laurel tree near the corner gave Laurel Place its name and was a favorite landmark for surveyors. By the early 1900s, photograph at left, San Rafael had taken on a much more populated and citified look.

Frank J. Costello and George Simmonds were listed as co-managers for the dance, and Glen A. Shaver as the floor manager.

Among the candidates were W. F. Magee, for justice of the peace; Robert E. Graham, for county clerk; Frank Sargent Holland, for county recorder; J. J. Keating, for sheriff, Dr. Fred E. Sawyer, for coroner and public administrator; Henry Lucas, for constable of San Rafael Township, and Edward I. Butler, for district attorney.

SAN RAFAEL HAD no place for the care of its seriously ill or injured until 1895. In that year, two sisters, Theresa and Adeline Smith, who had just graduated from the California Women's Hospital school in San Francisco, began operating a hospital in the large San Rafael home of their mother, Mrs. Robert Smith, on the north side of Fourth Street, just west of Lootens Place.

About the turn of the century, the sisters, later Mrs. Wallace Anderson and Mrs. U. S. Turley, moved their hospital to a house on Mission near Irwin. They continued to operate it until 1905 when Theresa left to take advanced studies.

In about 1900 a hospital was started at Lincoln and Fifth under the ownership of Drs. H. O. Howitt and W. F. Jones and the management of Mrs. Emma Gilman.

A FEW YEARS later these doctors bought and remodeled a residence on Mission near Nye and opened the Cottage Hospital which later became the San Rafael General Hospital.

A hospital on the east side of Shaver Street, south of Fourth, was opened about the turn of the century, with Dr. Frank Galehouse a prime mover in that program.

None of these hospitals has survived.

It was a proud occasion for San Rafael when work was completed on a new and modern "town hall" building on A between Fifth and Julia on March 17, 1907, and officials moved into those premises.

IT WAS A cause for pride, too, when San Rafael qualified officially as a charter city.

A movement to attain that status began in the early 1900s and gained momentum. An election was set for May 29, 1912, to elect a board of freeholders to draft a city charter. There were two rival slates of freeholder candidates, one backed by the Civic League, the other by the Merchants Association.

The elected freeholders were Henry Gieske, Ludwig Johansen, J. H. Clark, H. B. Meyer, E. S. Rake, J. B. Lovell, Lawrence Moore, Frank Riede, Louis Smith, Charles H. Dubois, E. B. Martinelli, L. E. Fleischman, Salvador Pacheco, Robert Dollar and Robert Atterbury. These men set to work upon the charter.

PRIOR TO THE election Vincent Neale, prominent San Rafael lawyer, wrote to the editor of the Independent:

"Its (charter's) general merit consists in the fact that it takes the government of the city out of the hands of the legislature, gives the people home rule and relieves them of all limitations in powers other than those imposed by themselves. . . .

"As to the specific points of merit, the new charter provides for the nomination of candidates for office by petition...It prohibits the use of any party designation on the ballot....It provides for the mayor being elected by the people directly...."

NEALE MADE this criticism: "The mayor and the council are to get no salaries as before. This is an injustice....There ought to be a hospitality fund at the command of the mayor so that when distinguished visitors come, they can be taken around the city and entertained."

The Independent informed its readers of the results of the 1912 election:

"The San Rafael city charter was endorsed by the electors of San Rafael last Saturday by a 7 to 1 vote. Out of about 2,200 electors of San Rafael, only 440 took interest enough in the charter to go to the polls and vote. Out of the number who did cast their vote, 382 voted in the affirmative. . . .

"THE CHARTER gives the city council more power and it is up to the people of San Rafael to change any of its provisions by a two-thirds vote at any election that may be called for that purpose."

The charter was subsequently ratified by the state legislature and went into effect Jan. 25, 1913.

First officials to serve under the charter were Richard Kinsella, mayor, Henry Knittle, E. C. Lynd, Eugene Bogle, and James Begley, councilmen, Arthur Scott, treasurer; Eugene Smith, clerk; Fred Miller, assessor; Edward I. Butler, attorney; Herbert De La Montanya, judge; Daniel N. Schneider, fire chief, and John E. Healy, police chief.

SEVERAL TIMES through the years the city council has set up committees to propose revisions to the city charter, and minor changes have been made. But on the whole, the original instrument has continued to served the city well.

San Rafael has had two major city-supported recreation centers that have since disappeared. And strange as it may now seem, San Rafael was the sports center for the entire Bay Area during the early part of this century.

World-famous prizefighters such as Joe Gans trained at Billy Shannon's place on West Fourth Street while followers of the sport gathered at the bar to argue the respective merits of rival battlers.

THE FINEST swimmers of the Bay Area displayed their skills at the San Rafael Municipal Baths. It was there that Eleanor Garatti of San Rafael received her first coaching. She went on to become an Olympic champion.

Boating enthusiasts berthed their crafts at the San Rafael Yacht Harbor.

It was in 1914 that San Rafael's city council decided to build and operate a municipal bathhouse.

The property was purchased from James Flood for $500. The site had already served as an outdoor swimming pool for many years, filled with water from the San Rafael Canal.

LOW BIDDER for the construction of the bathhouse was Joseph Kappenman at $31,380. The building was of prefabricated steel, and large, measuring more than 200 feet in length and standing more than 50 feet high. There was an oval-shaped glass roof. And above the pool was a balcony, 100 feet long and 40 feet wide, from which spectators could watch the swimmers.

The baths opened with the completion of the mission-style building in late 1914 at Second Street and Lincoln Avenue. The opening event was the first of many aquacades and diving and racing competitions to be held there.

Water from the bay was filtered and then used to fill the concrete tank. There was no heating of the water, but it was luxury enough at that time for the swimmers to be protected by roof and walls from the cold winds off the canal.

WHEN SAN RAFAEL first decided to build a bathhouse, a newspaper had editorialized:

"In connection with the baths, the city should own the marshland west of the present lake and convert it from an unsightly spot into a public park, playgrounds and athletic field."

It was a splendid idea, but like so many other projects of such great potential, it died, unrealized.

HAROLD DUFFY, manager of the baths for many years, said the rates there were "the cheapest in the Bay Area — 50 cents for adults, nominal fees for children."

For years the baths flourished. Then came the depression years of the early 1930s. San Rafael slashed the salaries of city employees. And when a request was made for sand for filters at the bathhouse, and for some new towels, the city fathers of the time decided the baths were too expensive to be operated any longer and ordered them closed.

The building was occupied by the H. C. Little Burner Co. until fire destroyed it on June 4, 1941.

THE INDEPENDENT on May 25, 1937, reported: "A program of extensive development of San Rafael's municipally - owned and operated yacht harbor is being mapped by the city council to be put into execution at an early date.

"Existing berths will be enlarged and modernized, and new units will be provided by the dredging of the Mary Street Basin, utilities and sanitary facilities being provided in both units."

The yacht harbor was sold by the city and the land filled. Apartment houses and industrial buildings are now on the site. Boats and boat-owners, however, continue to make extensive use of the canal waters which are periodically dredged.

IN REFERENCE to "lost" public property within the limits of incorporated San Rafael, there was the Fourth Street block from Court to Lootens Place that was owned for a time by Marin County.

An article in the Marin Journal of Sept. 29, 1881, stated: "William Barr has the contract for building the $10,000 residence of J. O. Eldridge at the corner of Fourth and Court."

William Barr Sr. was a native of Scotland who came to San Rafael in 1875. He was a builder and was associated with William T. Coleman in the Marin County Water Co. He also served several terms as a Marin County supervisor, as did his son, William Jr.

JOHN O. ELDRIDGE was a member of the firm of H. M. Newhall of San Francisco. The home Barr built for him was two stories, as was that of his wife's sister and her husband, the Allan Lees, who lived next-door.

It was Allan Lee who built the first gas plant in San Rafael. In 1876, in partnership with Eldridge, he organized the San Rafael Gas Co. In 1887 they added to their services the electric lighting for San Rafael.

Next to the Lee house was another home built for Eldridge and rented to tenants. And on the corner of Fourth at Lootens was a large white house, the home of Judge and Mrs. M. C. Dufficy.

GRACE ELDRIDGE, daughter of the John Eldridges, married Sidney B. Cushing, and she and her husband lived in the house that had been built by her father. After the county acquired the block from these private owners, the old Eldridge home housed several of its departments including the agricultural commissioner, the highway patrol and the office of Judge Herbert De La Montanya.

Next to it was the county's detention home for juveniles.

All these facilities were located conveniently adjacent to the courthouse. But the block was eventually sold to Jacob Albert for his department store site. And today's Macy's store functions where the Eldridge and Lee houses once stood.

WORLD WAR I was a time of sorrow and determination in San Rafael. Major civic programs and projects were set aside temporarily so that all energies could be directed toward the war effort.

While San Rafael's young men were fighting from the trenches in France, mired in mud and blood, the folks at home were buying "Victory Bonds" and performing other patriotic services.

And when the Armistice was signed and the young men had returned from their fighting overseas, there was great rejoicing — except among those families whose "doughboy" sons had fallen in the field. These last bore their grief bravely.

WITH PEACE came renewed activity and brighter things for San Rafael.

One such event was the founding of the Blumenfeld theater chain in San Rafael.

The late Max Blumenfeld opened the Orpheus Theater Jan. 20, 1920. The theater building had been constructed for Blumenfeld by the Tunstead Estate some three years after Blumenfeld had entered the motion picture business in San Francisco.

The Orpheus was located on the north side of Fourth between A and B. Capacity audiences were frequent, and from what was described as "luxurious appointments," the spectators watched the latest silent movies, groaning over the plight of beautiful heroines, hissing the villains and cheering the handsome leading men who were ever ready to protect the helpless.

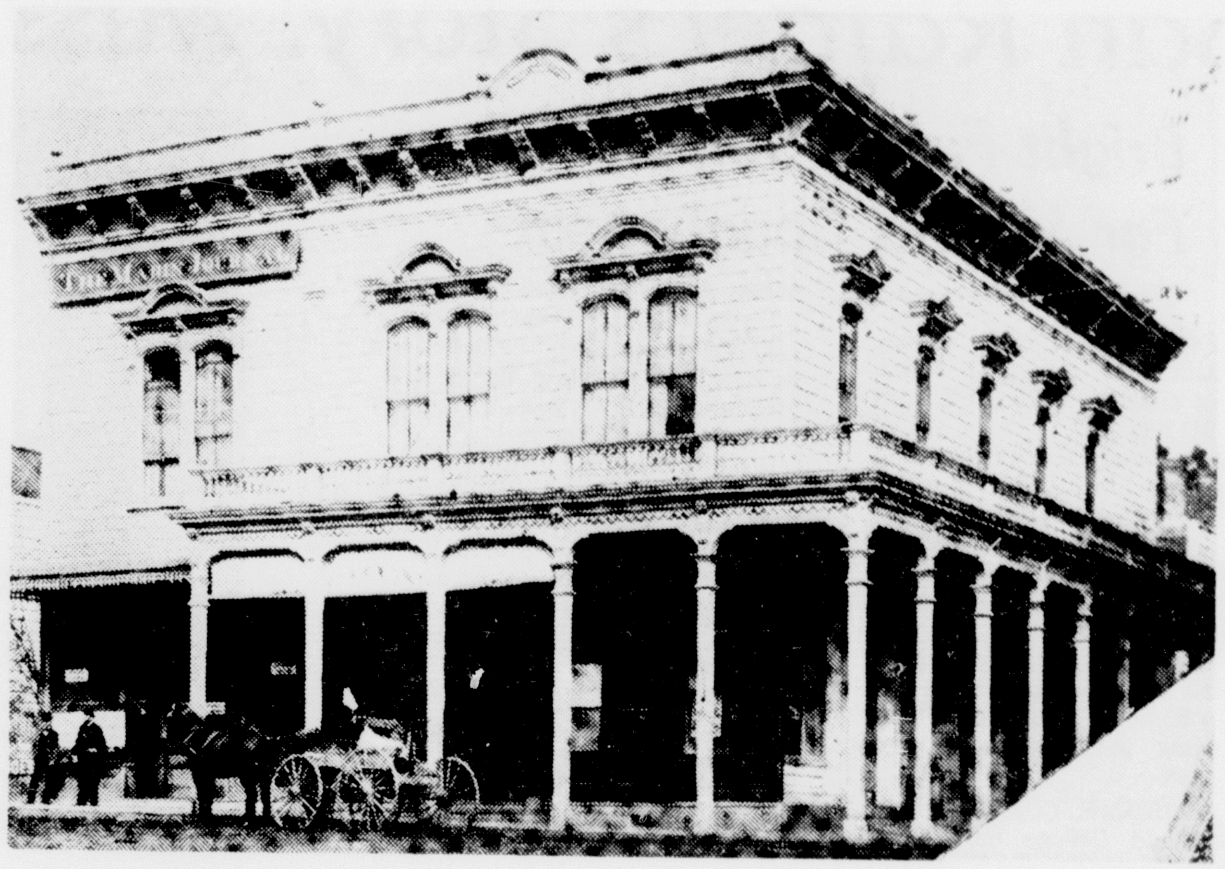
WORDS OF current hit songs of the time were flashed on the screen and the audience sang to the accompaniment of music from the pipe organ in the orchestra pit.

Fire gutted the theater, but the building was repaired and remodeled, then reopened in 1931 as the Rafael Theater.

The Blumenfeld theater chain prospered and grew, with the sons of the founder, well trained in business administration, carrying on, after their father's death.

When "talking" pictures made their debut, the Blumenfelds opened the El Camino Theater on the northwest corner of Fourth at Lootens. It was acclaimed "the finest showhouse of its size in the Bay Area."

FATHER-AND-SON and brother teams played leading roles in early San Rafael journalism. Ai Barney, upper left, and son Jerome Barney were the co-founders of the city's first newspaper, the Marin Journal, in 1861. Brothers Cassius Clay Olmsted, lower left, and Stephen H. Olmsted were long-time publishers of the Journal, conducting a lively rivalry with James Cochran of the San Rafael Independent.



THE MARIN JOURNAL, first newspaper to be published in San Rafael and Marin County, had a number of homes in its early years, but in the 1870s and 1880s it was printed in this Odd Fellows Lodge Building at Fourth and D streets.

THE EL CAMINO is gone, but the Rafael remains a well-patronized theater, although the Independent-Journal in October, 1968, reported the sale of the Blumenfeld Theaters to Cinerama Corp. of New York.

San Rafael residents were jubilant when, on Sept. 15, 1912, Postmaster C. C. Olmstead announced that San Rafael was scheduled to receive a new $100,000 postoffice — providing a site could be located on a principal street.

The property at D and Third was bought, but it was a number of years before the building was completed. It served the public well, and continues to do so as a branch postoffice, while a new main post office is located at 40 Bellam Boulevard.

CHARTER REVISION was a hot topic in San Rafael in 1934.

In its Nov. 8 issue, the Marin Journal carried the headline: "Voters Defeat Proposals to Amend City Charter."

Below it, the story ran: "Both proposals for amending the San Rafael city charter received an overwhelming defeat at the hands of the voters last Tuesday....The first proposal providing for a four-year term for the mayor was defeated by a decisive vote....

"Likewise, proposal No. 2 to have the appointment of the chief of police placed in the hands of the council, instead of being elected by the people, was defeated. This proposition was given most of the attention by the voters and they sent that measure rolling to the waste heap to the tune of 2,604 to 1,106."

San Rafael residents were determined to keep their right to elect the police chief and certain other city officials, as they demonstrated again at subsequent charter revision elections in 1947 and 1967.

Bright Future Still Ahead For Marin's County Seat

Occasionally a cry arises that San Rafael is functioning under an outmoded charter. But the majority of the citizens inevitably rally behind the principal provisions of the instrument that went into effect in 1913.

Along with an excellent public school system, San Rafael has been home to a number of outstanding private schools and colleges.

DOMINICAN CONVENT and Dominican College have been part of San Rafael since 1889. Even earlier, in 1868, the Dominican Sisters came to Marin, to work at St. Vincent's orphanage, and they remained there until the Christian Brothers took over that work in 1894.

Domoinican Convent, Dominican College and the Dominican Upper and Lower Schools were all based upon land that was once the property of William Tell Coleman, until 1965 when the upper and lower schools were moved to Sleepy Hollow and renamed San Domenico.

The college continues to thrive in San Rafael with an international reputation as an institution for higher learning.

Mount Tamalpais Military Academy was incorporated in the autumn of 1890 with Dr. Arthur Crosby as its president. It is now San Rafael Military Academy, operating under Episcopal Church auspices.

Other schools have moved to new sites or vanished from the scene.

One such was the Katharine Branson School, begun in San Rafael by Katharine Branson and her sister, Laura, but later moved to Ross.

Another was the Hitchcock Military Academy, later the Tamalpais School. It was founded by Charles Hitchcock. That property in the Dominican area was sold and now belongs to the Marist Fathers who operate their St. Peter Chanel Seminary there.

MANY ROMAN Catholic children have received their schooling at St. Raphael's School on the old mission site. And upper grade Catholic children of the city frequently attend Marin Catholic High School in Greenbrae.

Through the years, many private kindergartens and nursery schools have served the moppets of the town.

A chapter in Marin history unknown to many of its residents is its brief era as "a movie capital."

The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine recalled those days in a feature story in 1949 that stated: "California Motion Picture Studio, fathered by George Middleton 34 years ago, was located on two blocks of what is now the eastern entrance to Sun Valley."

THE COMPANY'S heroine, said the story, was "Beatriz Michelena of Castilian blood."

Films made here carried such titles as "Salomy Jane," "The Lily of Poverty Flat," "The Unwritten Law," "Just Squaw," "Salvation Nell," "Mignon" and "The Passion Flower."

Leading men included the likes of House Peters, William Nigh and Andrew Robson. Many San Rafael people appeared as "extras." And payroll, construction and operation costs were said to "run as high as eight million dollars."

Pictures were made on the A. W. Foster estate and at Coppa's.

A MAJOR FIRE proved a setback and the property was sold. Eventually most of it passed into the hands of Irving B. Litchfield.

But, said the article, at the company's peak, Middleton had gathered in San Rafael a huge staff of the industry's finest technical experts and had erected a movie-making plant "recognized as the largest and most complete in the United States."

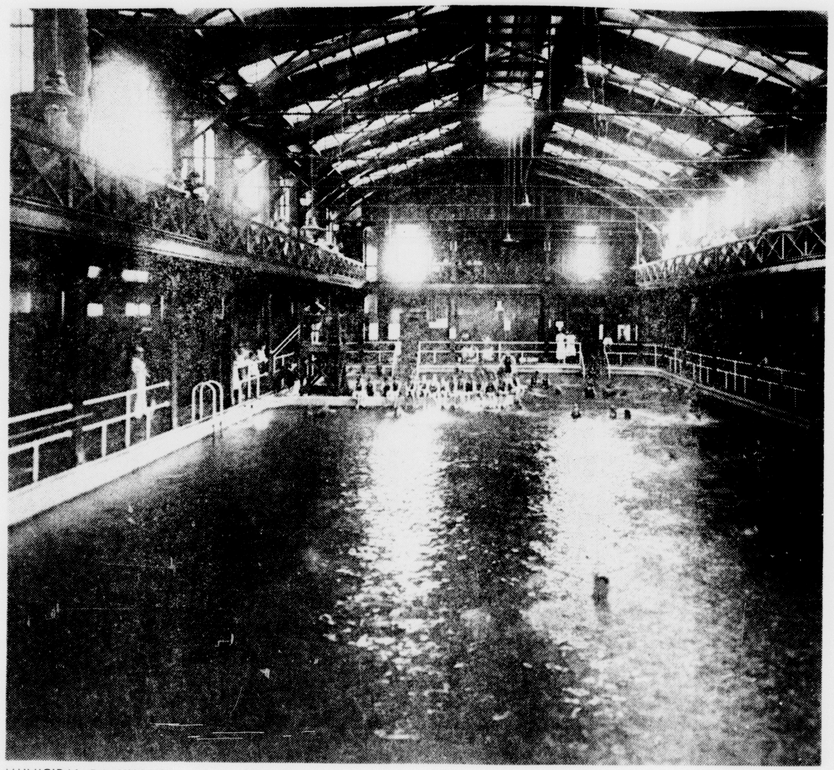
At the turn of the century, beer wagons rumbled frequently along San Rafael's streets. These came from the San Rafael Brewery, where the German Fritz Goerl, was the master-brewer.

AN EVENT THAT was to have a major impact upon San Rafael was the completion of the Golden Gate Bridge linking Marin to San Francisco in 1937. It brought thousands of new residents to Marin, many of them to San Rafael. Traffic on Highway 101, the Redwood Highway, through the city increased immensely, resulting in a clamor for its improvement that is only now being realized.

But it also marked the end for passenger train and ferryboat service between Marin County and San Francisco, except for a vestigial operation revived out of Tiburon.

Gone, too, is the Richmond-San Quentin ferry service. Travelers to and from the East Bay now use the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

AFTER World War I, Marin, proud of its sons who had served Uncle Sam but saddened by the deaths of some of them, erected this Doughboy memorial statue on the courthouse grounds.



THE MUNICIPAL BATHHOUSE with its filtered water and its protection against the outside cold was a favorite recreational spot of San Rafael residents after it opened in 1914. Spectators could watch the swimmers from the balconies. And sometimes the baths were the site for aquacades and swimming competitions.

NO HISTORY OF San Rafael or any other community would be complete without some review of the newspapers. Indeed, no such history could be written, were it not for the newspapers that have recorded faithfully the events of past decades.

The historian finds himself repeatedly going to the files to review and digest old issues, or reassessing and rewriting the works of other historians who have already done so.

Indispensible to any historian interested in Marin County's past are the files of the Marin Journal, first newspaper to be published in the county. It first appeared March 23, 1861, run off by hand, a page at a time, on a Washington press, by Ai Barney and son Jerome, and printed on paper produced at Taylor's paper mill at Olema.

THE ELDER BARNEY was a well-educated easterner with a newspaper background who dedicated the Journal to the people of Marin County and their interests. But it was the son, Jerome, who was "front man" for their San Rafael operation, and who really nursed it to prosperity and influence.

Other newspapers sprang up in the late 19th Century in San Rafael and Marin as rivals of the Journal, the most formidable of them being the Tocsin, started in 1880.

But it was at the turn of the century that the most serious challenger to the Journal appeared on the scene in the Independent, founded by H. H. Granice with his daughter Celeste as star reporter and editor.

THE RIVALRY between the Journal, under co-publishers Stephen H. and Cassius Clay Olmsted, and the Independent, under publisher Michael F. Cochrane, was a particularly lively and interesting one in the early 1900s. Despite the competition, the rival publishers respected each other.

Harry Lutgens succeeded Cochrane as publisher of the Independent and made it into a daily newspaper on Oct. 17, 1927. The paper grew and prospered under his leadership, and then in 1937 he sold it to Roy A. Brown, Justus F. Craemer and William O. Hart.

Hart was killed in 1942 in a commercial airliner crash, but Brown and Craemer gave the Independent vigorous leadership and saw it merge with the Marin Journal in 1948 when they acquired for their California Newspapers Inc. the ownership of the county's oldest paper and created the San Rafael Independent-Journal.

ANOTHER MILESTONE in San Rafael journalism occurred in 1967 when the Independent-Journal began publishing on a new Hoe five-unit Colormatic press in an expanded building at Fifth and B in the heart of downtown San Rafael.

Since the deaths of Roy A. Brown and Justus F. Craemer, their sons, Wishard Brown as publisher, and Jack Craemer, as editor and co-publisher, have guided the Independent-Journal to new circulation gains and to increased service to the Marin and southern Sonoma community.

The Independent-Journal had celebrated its 100th anniversary in 1961 with a four-issue special edition, appearing a century after the first issue of the Marin Journal had been distributed to eager readers at the dinner tables of the old San Rafael Hotel.

THE APRIL 6, 1949, special issue of the Independent-Journal, marking the city's celebration of its 75th "birthday," had, perhaps, best reflected the spirit of optimism so evident in post-war San Rafael. Under the headline "Many Projects Are Under Way," it reported:

"The tempo of the city's progress since it first saw the light of day has been stepped up in recent years....San Rafael's population has more than doubled in nine years.

"With the great influx of people has come a multitude of problems. During the war, when material shortages made normal expansion of facilities impossible, all sorts of temporary expedients had to be resorted to in an effort to take care of the new population.

"BUT NOW THAT materials and labor are becoming more available on an adequate scale, projects long deferred have moved to the top of the agenda." The article then went on to enumerate some of those projects, and to express the confidence that yet more were in the offing.

It is a spirit that has been continued until this day.

If there were once San Rafael residents who wanted to keep their community a quiet village, a "bedroom suburb" to San Francisco, they were no longer to prevail. The overwhelming spirit was one for progress.

Hitching posts were gone. Parking meters were here.

THE NEW ERA that had come to San Rafael was not without its problems. Residents now welcome light industry, work hard for improved transportation, patronize local stores that stock well, maintain fine schools and churches, and take pride in their modern homes.

Not even disasters such as the conflagration that in 1957 wiped out a block of the business district on Fourth between D and E could set back a determined city for long. Although 17 business houses and one residence were destroyed with damage estimated at more than two million dollars, the block was soon rebuilt, more attractive and substantial than ever.

A new city hall and police station on Fifth Avenue, fine new subdivisions on the outskirts, the new postoffice, the major highway construction program, expanding city limits — all these and many more signs can be seen today that affirm that San Rafael — the mission around which grew a village that became first a town and then a city — is not content to rest upon past laurels. That bigger and better things yet lie ahead.

And that the future holds things in store for San Rafael that even its farsighted and courageous pioneers could not have anticipated.

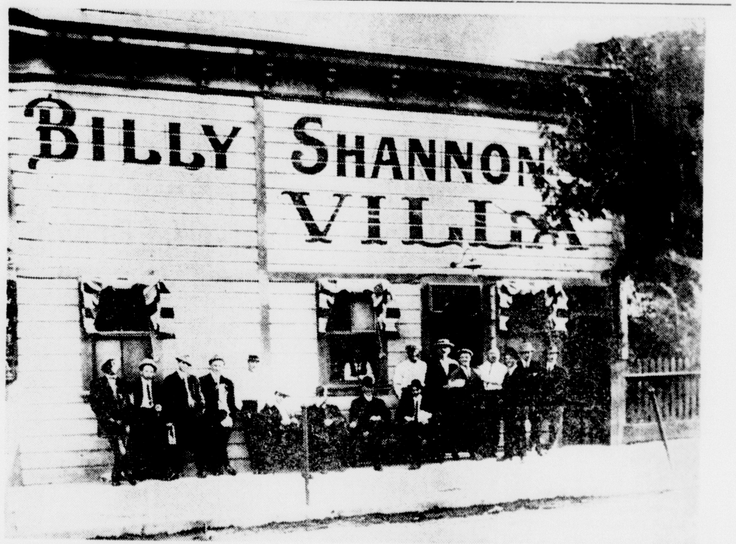
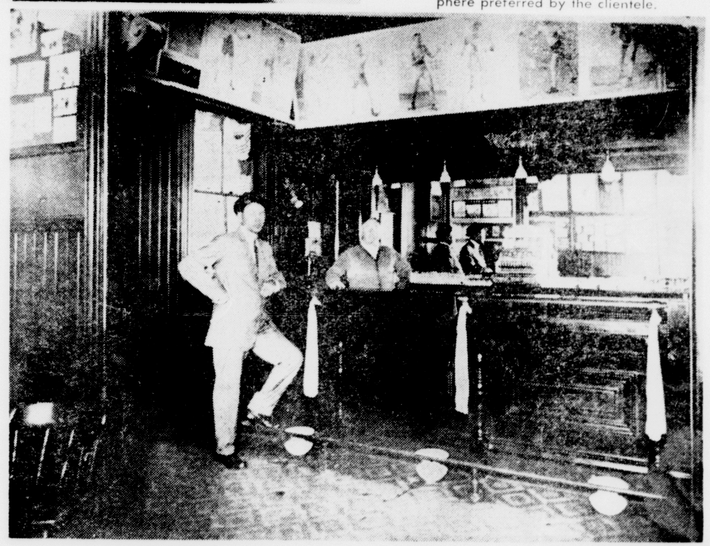
SAN RAFAEL IN the late 19th Century and early 20th Century was a society and recreational center. And one of the favorite gathering places was the open-air baths on the San Rafael Canal. The photo was taken in 1902.



ONE OF THE most colorful places in turn-of-the-century San Rafael was Billy Shannon's Villa on Fourth Street in the West End. Not only was it one of the town's busiest saloons, but it was also training quarters for some of the world's best-known fighters, including the great Joe Gans. Along with the boxers, it also attracted the sports followers of the town and the Bay Area, and was a favorite gathering place for the male populace. In the photo above, some of them can be seen gathered outside the villa soaking up the sun and arguing the respective merits of their favorite fighters. Proprietor Shannon, at left, was himself a boxer of considerable ability. A clever man in the ring, he reigned as the amateur lightweight champion of the Pacific Coast. He also fought with some success as a professional, and before opening his bar and training quarters in San Rafael was boxing instructor for the Los Angeles Athletic Club where he developed a number of good fighters. His West End place was described as "easily the leading training quarters in this section of the country" by the San Francisco press. In photo below, the bar inside the villa was decorated with hundreds of photographs of leading boxers in fighting poses to add to the "sports" atmosphere preferred by the clientele.



Appian Way Offers Trip Back To Ancient Rome

Tourists Can Still Travel The Route Once Taken By The Legions Of Powerful Empire

Most tourists to Italy are familiar with the Appian Way — at least with that stretch of the ancient Roman highway that leads from the Eternal City itself to the Catacombs and the Appian Hills beyond.

The road here still retains its original paving of basalt blocks and is marked by ancient mausoleums on either side, the best preserved of which is the tomb of Cecilia Metella.

This is the Via Appia of the guide books, ending some 30 miles from Rome, and the relics that mark its way belong mainly to the Christian era, to the days of Imperial Rome.

TO PURSUE the great highway beyond that point is to go backward in time to the days of Appius Claudius, who built the road in the third century before Christ — a magnificent engineering achievement in its day and still one of the marvels of the world.

Eventually the road was extended to Brindisi, on the heel of the Italian boot, linking the Tyrrhenian Coast with the Adriatic and opening all of southern Italy to Roman conquest. The country it passes through looms large in Roman history and is rich in monuments.

Along its route, at Benevento, where the road turns off from Naples, King Pyrrhus suffered a crushing defeat.

AT CAPUA, birthplace of the poet Horace, the amphitheater still stands where Spartacus fought, and organized his rebellion of gladiators and slaves. Nearby, Hannibal defeated the Romans before being finally crushed by them.

Beyond Capua one takes a step forward in time, invading the domains of Frederick II, whose defiance of the papal power almost changed the course of church history. His own preference seemed to lie towards the East; he introduced the harem, and he populated the area with his apparent favorites among races, the Saracens.

His influence, in Sicily and southern Italy, survives in the architecture, which has strong Arabic traces.

IT WAS ALSO the gathering grounds for the Crusaders, who debarked for the most part from Bari and Brindisi, where the Appian Road ended. Taranto, too, was a favorite port for the Crusaders, as well as an important way station on the Appian Way.

It would be more correct to say that the Crusaders disembarked at these harbors on the way back from the Holy Land. Many of them liked the scenery and the climate so well that they remained.

It is to these returning Crusaders, these lingering tourists and their descendants, that we owe the Norman-Arabic mixture of architecture and politics that distinguishes Southern Italy — the Mezzogiorno and Sicily — from the rest of the country.

TO UNDERSTAND properly the history of Italy, from Roman times to the present day, one need only to follow the march of the Roman legion, and the travels of the Crusaders, along the Appian Way.

One Of The Last Great Clowns

NOTES ON A COWARDLY LION by John Lahr; Alfred A. Knopf, 394 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

It's sad to think that one of the great comedians of our time — Bert Lahr—ended his illustrious career "pushing" a national brand of potato chips on television.

But that's probably the way many of the younger generation will remember his magical talent.

JOHN LAHR
A glowing tribute

However, I and millions more have a fonder memory of Lahr—as that marvelous Cowardly Lion of the classic film, "Wizard of Oz."

John Lahr, son of one of the last of the great clowns, has produced a glowing tribute, drawing on his father's recollections and on the memories of those who worked with him.

Lahr's world spanned the gamut of the entertainment field—burlesque, vaudeville, the golden years of Broadway under Ziegfeld and George White, to Hollywood and back to Broadway in the twilight of his life when he scored a dramatic triumph in "Waiting for Godot."

The comedian's early life was not one of luxury. His childhood was spent in the Bronx in a succession of traumatic experiences — school dropout, series of odd jobs and roughhouse gang roaming.

Young Lahr's account of his father is often touching, revealing the almost innate quality of a great clown—the sadness and the frustrating search for fulfillment.

IN HIS BEST remembered role, Bert Lahr, center, played the Cowardly Lion, while Jack Haley, left, was cast as the Tin Woodsman and Ray Bolger as the Scarecrow, in the classic movie, "The Wizard of Oz," filmed in 1939 with Judy Garland as the star and still seen annually on network television.

The Lahr story is another major link in a theatrical buff's better understanding of the word "entertainment."

A Civilized Critic With Some Provocative Ideas On Art

THE CONFUSION OF REALMS by Richard Gilman; Random House, 272 Pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

During the last few years Richard Gilman, Yale Drama School professor, has become one of the country's leading drama and literary critics.

His comments are invariably thought-provoking, informed and fairminded.

One basic concern runs through all his criticism, the "confusion of realms," that is, the confused expectations we have of art today, viewing it in turn as therapy, busy work, teacher, social prod, entertainment. There may be fringe benefits of that nature, he concedes, but the true function of art is to re-invent life, and that is his guideline in these collected essays.

It is a book one settles down with, gratefully. Not only is his civilized prose a pleasure to read but his ideas merit the most careful weighing.

Like everyone else, he is deeply concerned with the plight of the modern novel (and theater). He is eager to encourage what he sees as signs of growth and talent, for example, the experimental work of Donald Barthelme and William H. Gass (whom Gilman rightly rates the more important writer), which he sees, and he explains why, as opening up a new dimension of the novel form.

However, he is not one to confuse innovation with novelty. One of his most fascinating essays traces the development of the Living Theater, here in the Bay Area last year, pointing out how, paradoxically, their attempted "breakthrough" to oneness with the audience is doomed by their narrow, and violent, ideas of love-peace, which he assesses as thinly disguised hatred of this audience.

Almost one-third of the book is devoted to a long look at Norman Mailer's career as writer-personality, but he offers perceptive comment on many fronts. Should there be a new white criticism to deal with the new black writing? What is Susan Sontag's true literary value?

In other essays he brings to our attention the real worth of some of Marshall McLuhan's thinking, which he feels is in danger of being lost in the silliness inherent in his work, takes a well-considered look at "Mac-Bird," and offers an intriguing new interpretation of Ibsen's plays.

Capsuled Story Of Indian-Fighting

WAR CRIES ON HORSEBACK by Stephen Longstreet; Doubleday, 335 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"War Cries on Horseback" is sub-titled "The Story of the Indian Wars of the Great Plains," but this is misleading; it starts with the Apache in the Southwest and ends with the murder of Sitting Bull in Montana — both far from the plains.

Actually, journalist-writer-artist Stephen Longstreet's book is a capsuled history of Indian-fighting west of the Mississippi, with side glances at life on the western frontier for both Indian and white.

Longstreet's style is staccato, made the more so by an aversion to the word "and" which results in a multiplicity of commas. Yet he captures both the movement and the boredom of frontier life for soldiers, settlers and Indians.

There are errors in detail, but the over-all picture is a true one. It is the more so because Longstreet, unlike nearly every other writer about the Indian wars, does not simply divide the antagonists into "good guys" and "bad guys." He describes the cruelties of both red and white men and leaves little doubt that most of what happened was inevitable.

The Indians were simply outgunned — and double-crossed to boot.

The reader will find "War Cries on Horseback" a hard book to put down. 'Nuff said.

An Interesting Lot Of Californians

HUMBUGS AND HEROES by Richard Dillon; Doubleday, 356 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"Humbugs and Heroes" is sub-titled "A Gallery of California Pioneers." This, however, is misleading.

Mill Valleyan Richard Dillon has gathered many who were not pioneers among his collection of California personalities thumb-nailed within the covers of this volume. Some of them, such as Robert Louis Stevenson and Jim Beckwourth, were scarcely Californians.

All of them, though, played some role in the Golden State deserving of being remembered. And the very variety of Dillon's selections adds piquancy to the volume.

For instance, probably few Californians ever heard of Ng Poon Chew or Joseph Heco, but they are here along side such luminaries as Colis P. Huntington, Luther Burbank and Mariano Vallejo — not to mention Harry Love and Tiburcio Vasquez.

If it seems strange to include Little Pete, who was neither humbug nor hero, he nevertheless lives in the lore of San Francisco, as Hatfield the Rainmaker does in that of Southern California.

All in all, the 63 sometime-Californians in the book are an interesting lot, and Dillon has made an engaging volume of their brief biographies.

Veteran Of Sports Fishing Disdains Our Polluted Bays

PACIFIC NORTH! By Don Holm; Caxton, 283 pages, $12.50. Reviewed by Wat Takeshita.

This is an adventure in sports fishing from south of Monterey to the Yukon, as experienced by the author in 30 years of fishing in the Pacific Northwest.

Illustrations and anecdotes whet the appetite of the occasional angler, who has experienced the thrill of that sudden tug, bucking pole and whine of racing line. For the more seasoned angler, the book includes a sprinkling of technical data on water temperatures, wind, types of lures and lines.

San Francisco Bay takes a beating. Holm asserts that San Francisco and San Pablo bays are so polluted that almost all bottom species and shellfish are inedible. "I have caught striped bass in the San Pablo channel that had more oil in them than in the crankcase of my Volkswagen."

This statement won't sit well with many a Marin angler, but it is right on target with the growing concern over bay pollution and preservation of environment.

Among the many valuable pointers offered is a healthy respect for the squalls and treacherous tides that can catch the careless unaware.

If You Simply Must Write That Novel . . .

By DON KEOWN

The priority question probably should be, not "how do I go about writing a novel?" but rather, "should I write a novel?"

And there are a good many hard, practical reasons why you probably should not.

You will be investing countless hours and risking tremendous frustration in an undertaking that offers slight chance of either financial or artistic reward.

In his "Writing Rackets," Robert Byrne of Mill Valley painted a brutally bleak, but honest picture of the remunerative opportunities open to the freelancer. And the novelist might very well be low man on that shaky totem pole.

A first novel manuscript is highly unlikely to ever see the printing press. Should it succeed, the novelist can then expect as payment for his efforts something less than the hourly wage earned by the common laborer.

Still, there are those who simply cannot resist the inner compulsion to write a novel. Egged on by ego, by creative instinct, by the exaggerated aura of glamor that has grown up around the novel, by the example of the isolated few who have made it big, thousands, talented and untalented alike, are hammering away at their typewriters by the hours, producing what each fondly hopes will prove to be the great American novel.

For their edification and direction, Dick Winfield has written "One Way to Write Your Novel." Or rather, someone using the name Dick Winfield, for in the true spirit of the fiction-writer, the author of this Writer's Digest-published book has chosen to use a pseudonym. We are told he is a successful regional novelist with a number of published books to his credit.

ONE WAY TO WRITE YOUR NOVEL by Dick Winfield; Writer's Digest, 161 pages, $5.95.

INCIDENT AT 125TH STREET by J. E. Brown; Doubleday, 176 pages, $4.95.

What Winfield, whoever he is, has done is to let less experienced authors in on some of his writing methods and thoughts.

He first discusses planning the work schedule. His own actual writing begins with the creation of his characters, although he admits that others would put the plot first. He then takes up dialogue, description (hold it down), sex (don't be overly explicit), the use of contrast, humor (don't try to define or force it), research, and finally, belatedly it seems to us, plotting.

The actual typing and self-editing are discussed, too, and finally the submission of the completed manuscript.

Such practical questions as the need for an agent are taken up. Winfield suggests you forego the agent and try to sell your first novel yourself. If you succeed, the agents will then come to you.

Less than many writers in the "how to write . . ." field, Winfield does not greatly exaggerate the compensation nor underplay the tedium. Still, it could not be said that he offers an altogether realistic picture of what writing a novel involves.

After all, if you are going to decide at the outset that the answer to that priority question — "should I write a novel?" — is "no," then Winfield's market for his newest book automatically shrinks by one. He's got a vested interest in encouraging you to overrule your commonsense and take the plunge into the ranks of novel-writing hopefuls.

Winfield's book offers some genuine assistance and inspiration for those who do so decide.

The novel, however, like most creative arts, is a highly individualistic thing, and one can learn only so much from the example of others. On the whole, success or failure is determined by what lies inside the artist — and to a very large measure by luck.

No amount of advice, no matter how expert, can instill talent where none exists. Nor provide that essential good fortune that means the difference between recognized and unrecognized talent. It can only ease the path a little for the already talented.

"One Way to Write Your Novel" might well do that.

J. E. BROWN has written in his first novel, "Incident at 125th Street" a suspense story reflecting today's urban tensions. Brown is the advertising director and chief executive officer for Ziff-Davis Inner Circle, publishers of such magazines as Boating and Skiing. He lives in Westport, Conn.

FOR HIS first novel, J. E. Brown, an advertising director for a magazine publishing firm, has written a good, hard crime yarn that probes into a perplexing question of today's society:

Just how far do the responsibilities of one person, as a citizen and a creature of God, go toward his fellow men?

David Martin, middle-aged New York executive, faced that question quite suddenly when, upon a commuter train platform, he came upon three young punks "rousting" an elderly man. Almost impulsively, he chose the role of good Samaritan and went to the old man's aid. And when the incident had ended, one of the three youths was dead.

Martin at first was hailed as a hero. But then political pressure began to make itself felt. And suddenly Martin found himself confronted by possible serious criminal charges.

There had been witnesses to the incident. But apparently they have a different idea as to one person's moral and civic obligations to another than did Martin when he placed himself in jeopardy. No one comes forward to testify in his behalf.

A newspaper is involved in the search for the truth. And the very serious problems and turmoil of today's big city life, including the racial issue, figure in the story.

If Brown's story has a fault, it is that he stretches a bit too hard to underscore in his novel the "toughness" of today's urban society. There are times when this effort seems self-conscious.

But on the whole, he has written a meritorious book with real meaning and contemporary relevance.

LADIES, DO YOU want to say a special and different kind of "I Love You" to your husband?

Then send him to work with a fresh package of figs in his briefcase.

Or start breakfast with an icy split of champagne.

Or explore and massage his feet while he watches TV.

Don't blame us. The ideas are culled from "365 More Ways To Say 'I Love You' " by Janie Gardner (Hawthorn, $2.95), which, if nothing else, is different.

Where else would you encounter the suggestion that you "nuzzle the inside of his knee" or that you "bake a homemade peach pie and with a fork poke his name on the crust"?

ONE OF THE more versatile, talented and successful of the younger poets is Ron Padgett, no Rod McKuen when it comes to selling books, but nevertheless a versemaker with a considerable following.

Part of the New York Poets Group, a bunch of young writers influenced by Frank O'Hara and Kenneth Koch, he has a number of books of poems to his credit, the latest "Great Balls of Fire" (Holt, Rinehart, $5.95 hardcover, $3.50 paperback).

It is a highly comtemporary collection, commenting upon the present with the vocabulary and from the viewpoint of today's younger generations, yet utilizing a number of varied and inventive rhythms and styles.

FOUR NATURE guides for "non-specialists," both adults and children, written by William Atherton DePuy in the 1920s, have been reissued by Dover Publications in that house's high quality paperback format.

They are "Our Animal Friends and Foes," "Our Bird Friends and Foes," "Our Insect Friends and Foes" and "Our Plant Friends and Foes." Each book is priced at $2.

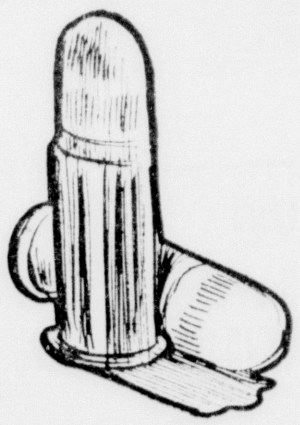
The new Dover reprints are reproductions of second editions that appeared in 1910, complete with illustrations. The author wrote always on the layman's level as he described the appearance, habits and interrelationships of a wide variety of living things. Each is evaluated as harmful or helpful to man. And despite the passing of the decades, the books should fit in perfectly with the new and overdue wider interest in ecology.

WITH ITS January issue, New American Review has shifted from a three-times-a-year to a four-times-a-year publication schedule.

Sleuths & Suspense

DECOY by Arthur Maling; Harper & Row, 199 pages, $4.95.

AND THE BULLETS WERE MADE OF LEAD by Paul Wheeler; Doubleday, 192 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.



The authors of suspense-adventure novels have learned well the value of a foreign setting to add color to their stories.

Arthur Maling chose Mexico for his "Decoy." A young trucker, temporarily disabled and in ill luck, accepts, against his better judgment, a mission to Mexico City, partly for the money, partly to forget his troubles and partly to kill time. Once there, he finds he has been "conned" into a smuggling operation. And the tough guys at its southern terminus aren't happy at his inability to produce the money he was supposed to have brought across the border.

The action returns north of the line, then back to Mexico again for the violent conclusion. It is not quite up to Harper's usual very high standard, but nevertheless sufficiently diverting.

Paul Wheeler has set his "And the Bullets Were Made of Lead" in London where freelance writer Jeremy Blake lives, in Paris to where Blake goes to answer a call for help from a former sweetheart, and in Germany where Blake is led by his investigation of a neo-Nazi movement. There's considerable action along the way. Wheeler, however, does not take full advantage of this varied geography. And again, the story, while not top-drawer, is not a "yawner" either.

When Refinished Furniture Is Too Glossy

By ANDY LANG

Ever refinish a piece of furniture with varnish, lacquer or one of the other clear, surface materials and then decide that it has too blatant an appearance?

Almost as though it were saying: "Look at me. Don't I look nice and glossy? As you can see, I've just been refinished."

Another possible result is an uneven surface—one that seems fairly smooth until it is looked at in a certain light or at particular angle or when you run the tips of your fingers over it.

THERE'S SOMETHING that can be done about either of these conditions.

One method involves the use of powdered pumice and rottenstone. The other calls for sanding with a waterproof or wet-and-dry sandpaper. There also are special rubbing compounds on the market to achieve the same or similar results, but these come with their own instructions for use.

Since the pumice, rottenstone and sandpaper do not, let's see how they are handled to cut down excessive gloss and eliminate irregularities.

BEFORE ANYTHING is done to a final coat of finishing material, it should be allowed to harden at least one full day but preferably two or three days.

Using a felt pad, rub the surface with a mixture of powdered pumice and crude oil, working in the direction of the grain and applying light pressure. It is especially important to work lightly at the edges of the furniture, a precaution that should be observed, by the way, in all types of rubbing and sanding.

The pumice will smooth the surface and tend to dull the finish.

WIPE THE SURFACE with turpentine, then follow with powdered rottenstone, also mixed with oil, and rubbed in the same fashion as the pumice. Continue until you are satisfied with the amount of gloss achieved. This time it will be a satiny rather than a harsh gloss and have a more professional appearance.

Wipe again with turpentine and apply a coat of paste wax, following the directions on the container.

A satin finish also can be obtained with the waterproof sandpaper. Wrap the paper around a sanding block, apply a little water to the surface of the wood and sand very lightly in the direction of the grain.

AS YOU MOVE along, keep applying more water to the finish, as without it the paper will cut too deeply too rapidly. Occasionally wipe off the surface and stand back to assess the result. The less sanding that is necessary to obtain the desired appearance, the better.

Whichever method is used, work slowly and carefully. Impatience—the desire to see the result quickly—is the greatest troublemaker for the novice wood finisher.

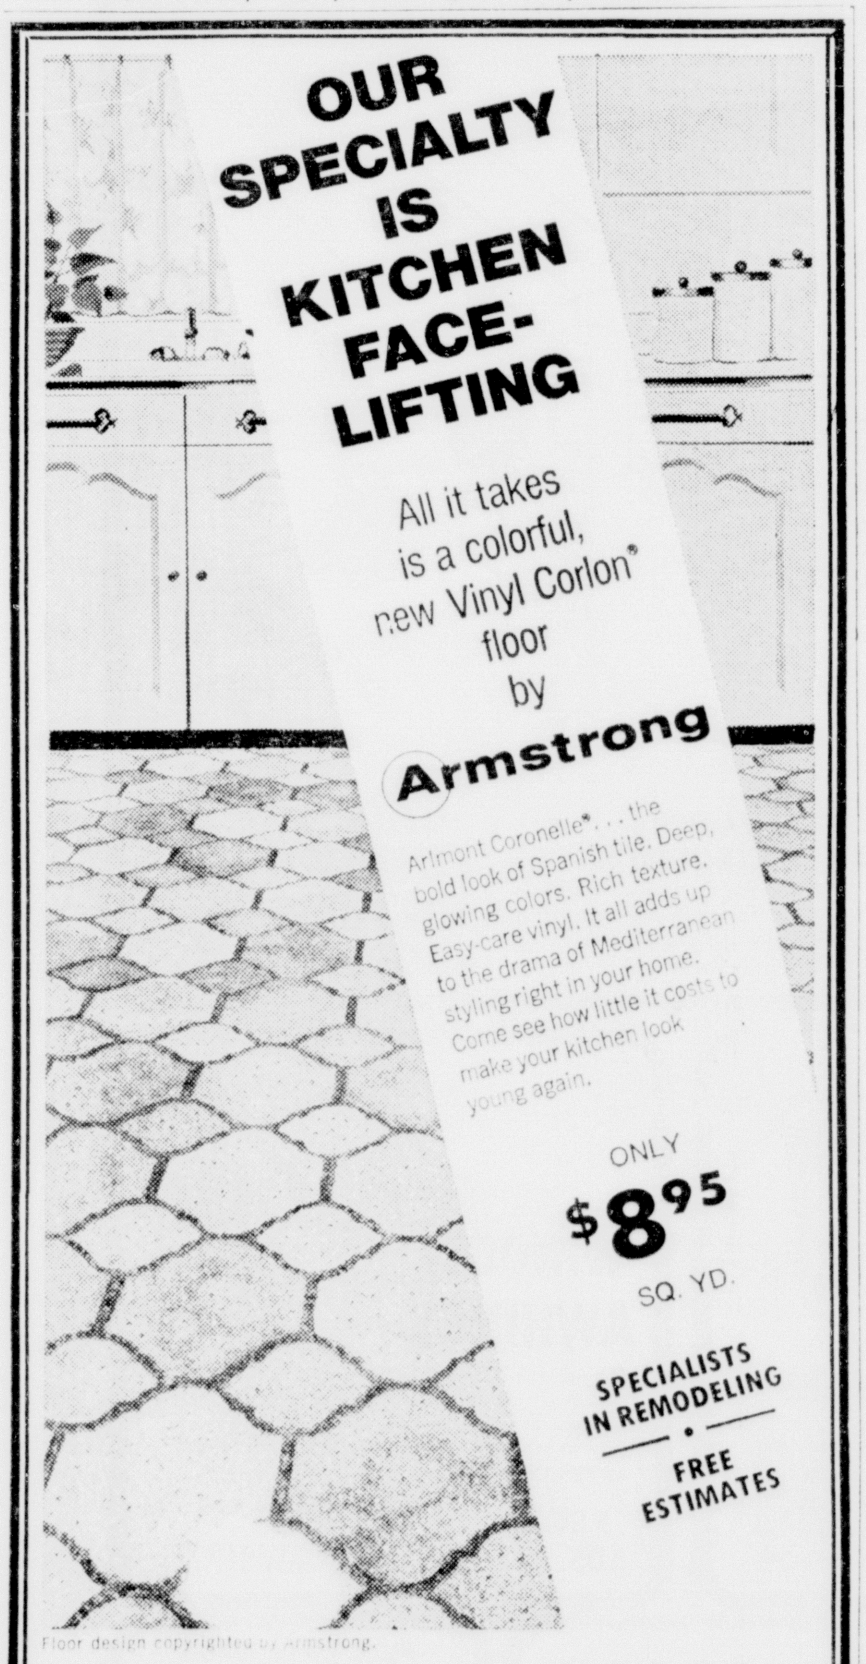
FIRST PRIZE, the 1970 All-America Rose Selections award-winner, is a deep rose-pink to light red hybrid tea.



How The 1st Prize Was Born

All-American Rose's Story Began In '62

By EARL ARONSON

The rose called First Prize, only winner of All-America honors for 1970, was the result of pollinating two roses known only by number.

After the cross was made, seeds formed in the rose hip and when ripened were planted. But eight years ago, the seedling that was to emerge as First Prize was just one of 50,000 to 80,000 seedlings growing in flats at the Jackson & Perkins gardens in Newark, N.Y.

AS THE PLANTS grew, they were transplanted into pots, many being discarded, until the total was trimmed to 1,000.

William Warriner, director of research, relates that the first five to 10 eyes from each of the 1,000 were sent to J&P fields in California and budded onto understock.

Then they waited.

In the summer of 1962, the plants bloomed. But these field blooms, Warriner said, were not typical of how a variety will look in the garden, especially the first summer.

WARRINGER SAID, "The first time we saw First Prize was in 1963 in the Newark test garden. It looked good then and was increased by budding perhaps 50 plants in the California field. This was to give us a base to build from, should the variety continue to prove interesting.

"Many a rose is increased to 50 or even 500, then dropped. In the fall of 1963 our 60-5172, as it was known then, looked good. Then in the spring of 1964 it continued to look good, so was increased to 500 plants.

"These plants were then available as ordinary two-year-old, field-grown plants to enter the 1966 All-America Rose Selections trials in 24 scattered gardens."

THE TRIALS TAKE two years and if a rose is a winner, it takes two years to build up a stock so that it may be offered for sale.

First Prize was not No. 1 in scoring the first year, but it moved to the top the second year and stayed there.

First Prize plants were available a year prior to the start of sales. Plants were sent to more than 100 public rose gardens in the United States.

Last June, AARS sent garden signs to the public gardens identifying the rose as First Prize.

The ancestry of First Prize includes Fashion, Enchantment, Independence, Mandalay, Golden Scepter, RMS Queen Mary, Eternal Youth, Golden Masterpiece, Revelry and four unnamed seedlings.

TREASURE CHEST is one of the new 1970 roses, a hybrid tea developed by Germain's Inc. that produces yellow-petaled flowers that contrast beautifully with the pink edging of the opening buds. As the flower matures, the pink overtones spread gradually from tips to centers.

Rosarians Are Eager To Start Planting

No one has been more frustrated by the uncommonly wet weather of this winter than the rosarian.

They have been itching to get their new bareroot shrubs into the ground.

And you can bet they will be doing just that, as soon as the soil in their gardens has dried sufficiently to permit them to get to work.

YOU MIGHT WELL join that movement, for there is nothing that will add greater charm to your landscape than a few new roses.

Keep in mind the First Prize, this year's only All America Selection, or one of the other fine new roses.

The selection is far from being limited to just First Prize. Besides the current pink All-American, there are award winners from past years as well as a flock of other favorites.

BEST PART IS that at this time of year — the bareroot season — nurseries have their largest rose selection of the year. Bareroot roses are easy to handle and plant.

If you're growing roses for the first time, choose a sunny spot for them — the sunnier the better, in coastal areas. Inland, they will tolerate some afternoon shade.

Provide a well drained soil for roses — and a planting hole that is wide and deep enough to accommodate the roots when spread out. Incorporate generous amounts (50-50 isn't too much) of a nurserymen's planter mix with soil when setting out roses.

Your nurseryman can outline a feeding program for you to follow after the roses have become established.

NOT ONLY ARE there roses noted for the cutting quality of their blooms, but there are others, especially among the floribundas, that excel as landscape shrubs. These roses are low-growing and reward you with almost continuous clusters of flowers.

Too, there are climbers for enhancing walls, trellises and overhead beams; plus tree roses for lining walkways, accenting gates and entryways.

The color choices are another of the versatile aspects of roses. Unbelievable hues have been achieved by plant breeders.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Barefoot roses are still high on the planting list. The earlier you make your selections, the more new varieties you'll find in stock.
- Deciduous fruit and shade trees are also available bareroot, and are easily planted now. Where space is limited, plant dwarf fruit trees—they add charm and beauty to the garden with their spring blossoms and summertime fruits.
- Most dormant pruning should be completed in February. Trees and shrubs that flower in spring, however, should not be pruned until after or during bloom.
- Plant grapes and berries now during their dormancy. Nurseries have varieties adapted to our climate.
- Peach leaf curl shows up after the tree leafs-out, with disfigured and distorted foliage. Control it by spraying now with a recommended dormant spray.

The All-American Plant Line-Up For 1970

Four flowers and two vegetables are on the All-American Selection list for 1970 and will be awaiting gardeners in the nurseries.

They are:

Marigold dwarf French Bolero.

Snapdragon F1 hybrid Madame Butterfly.

Dianthus chinesis double mixed China Doll.

Morning Glory Early Call Rise.

Tomato F1 hybrid cherry Small Fry.

Squash Waltham Butternut.

Marigold Bolero had competition from 12 marigolds and many other comparison varieties.

It is very uniform, early, double bicolored bright mahogany red and gold, 12 inches tall and up to 18-inch width. It blooms in 55 days from seed and has free flowering blooms of one and half to two and a quarter inches.

Snapdragon Madame Butterfly is a hybrid formula color mixture of the first double or azalea-flowered, open-faced type, 24 to 30 inches tall in scarlet, crimson, rosy orange, yellow, pink, golden bronze and magenta red.

How The Selections Are Made

Plant breeders around the world are working long and scientifically to create better, more useful varieties of vegetables and flowers.

Only the most outstanding new introductions, considered the best of their types, colors and for their purposes to date, can merit All-America Selection. That is a dependable guide for getting the best, most satisfactory varieties for the garden.

How are they chosen?

All-America Selection is a non-profit educational institution, self-perpetuated by its council of judges.

Each judge has well equipped trial grounds for flowers or for vegetables. He plants seeds of the entries proposed new varieties, under his soil and climatic conditions and compares them with nearest, most competitive varieties already in commerce.

This testing and all-season evaluation with comparison varieties is done at least two years before expected introduction. The resident judges and their trial locations are across southern Canada, Montreal to Vancouver, in all climatic sections of the United States and vegetable locations in Mexico.

There are sandy to clay soils, from below sea level in the California Imperial Valley to 8,700 feet elevation at Toluca, Mexico.

Twenty-nine highly qualified flower judges do the flower rating. There are 27 vegetable trials with the vegetable judges. None receive any pay.

Some are seed breeders or growers for seed firms. Others are horticultural professors and research workers with universities or experiment stations. One is a life-time gardener and retired editor, another a botanical garden director.

Garden Pages

Dianthus China Doll is a double flowered annual on plants 12 to 18 inches tall. The free-blooming flowers are more than an inch in diameter in salmon, red and red and white, vigorous.

Morning Glory Early Call Rise is a very early, very deep rose, giant flowering with a white throat. It reaches about seven feet in height with some support.

It blooms a month before other big morning glories. The flowers are four inches across.

TOMATO SMALL FRY is believed the most uniform, most prolific bearer, according to AAS. Clusters of seven or eight medium cherry-sized tomatoes are normal.

It is early, and fusarium and verticillium wilt resistant.

It is the only silver medal winner for 1970.

Winter Squash Waltham Butternut is a vigorous vining type, slightly larger than Butternut, with increased yields and improved uniformity. It seems to last longer in storage. The average fruit is nine by four-and-a-half inches with a straight shape.

The entry was from Prof. Robert E. Young of the Waltham Field Station, University of Massachusetts.

IF YOU'D LIKE to try some winners of recent years, here they are:

Cucumber Spartan Valor, Broccoli Green Comet, Cabbage Stonehead, Cauliflower Snow King, Cabbage Harvester Queen, Squash Kindred, Squash St. Pat Scallop.

Zinnia Wild Cherry, Geranium Carefree Scarlet, Deep Salmon and Bright Pink; Marigold First Lady and Orange Jubilee; Verbena Blaze, Celosia Golden Triumph, Zinnia Wild Cherry, Cherry Buttons, Torch and Rosy Future; Vinca Rosea procumbens Polka Dot, Cornflower Snow Ball.

SMALL FRY, a hybrid cherry tomato, at left, and Waltham Butternut, a thick, dry-fleshed winter squash, are the 1970 All-America vegetable choices.
